Suzanne Naseby - Shamanic Pathways

ShamanicPathways: Modern Men and Women walking an Ancient Path. Suzanne Naseby is a psychotherapist with a deep connect to nature and ceremony. She has been running WytchyWays Workshops since 2001 and in that time she has offered many public as well as private rituals, teaching circles and co-facilitated workshops on a wide range of spiritual themes. Suzanne is an artist who draws inspiration and guidance from her life experience as well as her connection to community, nature, art, dance movement and her sense of the Divine.

Shamanism is the original religion. The ‘rediscovery’ of shamanic practice may be one of the most important spiritual developments of our era. Yeshi and Suzanne have developed ShamanicPathways from their combined years of experience and take great pleasure in guiding others who seek a deeper connection with nature.

In this talk Suzanne Naseby will share her personal practise of incorporating the traditional way of the shaman with creative and intuitive ways of bringing wellbeing, guidance, empowerment and the expansion of consciousness in her life and inspiring others on their own path of the shaman.

From the President

Our AGM last month went off without a hitch and Stafford Lowe, our Returning Officer, had an easy job announcing the new Council Officers and Members who were unopposed.

They are:

- a. President Noel Jordan
- b. Vice-President Guy Kramhoft
- c. Vice-President Gordon Marshall
- d. Secretary Francois Capmeil
- e. Treasurer Maxine Simos
- f. Committee Member Jim Pennycook
- g. Committee Member Marilyn Smith
- h. Committee Member Gisela Volkland
- g. Committee Member Erica Schiller

We have an exciting year planned with seminars which will stretch you all, field trips to hone your spatial and earth energy skills, lovely speakers on varied subjects, and changes to the way we run our meetings to make them more relevant and responsive. Following afternoon tea there will be practical dowsing exercises with experienced dowsers for those who need it. You can still chat to your friends and make new ones, if you prefer.

We need members who have special knowledge of web sites to come forward and join our Editorial Web Board. If you're an experienced dowser and want your name on the REGISTER OF DOWSERS please read the article and send us your particulars.

I wish you all a happy, joyful and productive year of dowsing. Make sure you have plenty of fun too!

Best wishes

Noel

Leys, Sacred Sites and Beer Lines

A Visionary Landscape, touching on Alfred Watkins' work as a beer salesman. As the publication date for the BSD newsaletter is April 1, we thought this might go down a treat.

Since the publication of Alfred Watkins' book, 'The Old Straight Track', in 1925, it has been known that pre-reformation churches, standing stones, holy wells and other ancient sacred sites formed linear patterns on the landscape, now known as leys.

To the academic world, leys are a questionable phenomenon, a source of constant controversy. To the mystic, they are no enigma. They are pathways of the planetary life force, the Earth Spirit, which often manifests as an apparition of a goddess or white lady at significant nodal points along their length. Such apparitions, it is believed, gave rise to the sacred places which mark leys. Shortly after the publication of 'The Old Straight Track', a second, less well known book came out, dealing with a related phenomenon. It was Wilfred Atkins' book, 'The Wibbly Wobbly Way'.

Avebury Henge

Atkins had noticed that some leys not only included monasteries, abbeys and other sacred sites where beer is brewed, but ancient public houses where it is consumed. He suggested that Britain's pubs have their own ley system of Beer Lines. Its centre is at Avebury Henge, Europe's largest megalithic stone circle, or to be more precise, at The Red Lion, which stands at the centre of the circle. Radiating out from here is a network of Beer Leys linking pubs across the length and breadth of the land.

If this is correct, our oldest pubs were built upon ancient sacred places along the leys. They are power•points in the world grid where we can plug into the cosmic mains and our spiritual source. The Beer Leys which link them form part of the sacred landscape of Britain. Beer Leys are not straight like Alfred Watkins' leys. They meander wonkily across the landscape from pub to pub, like a drunk on a night out.

Atkins was quick to point out that this perfectly represents the influence of beer on the ley line system. However, it also mirrors the findings of experienced dowzers who have made a lengthy investigation of Britain's longest alignment, the Michael line, which runs right across the country linking a line of St Michael's churches from St Michael's Mount in Cornwall to Norfolk. They discovered that the Michael line actually contains two dowsable energy polarities which weave and meander around each other in exactly the same way as Wilf's Beer Lines.

Michael and Wilf (Sorry Harmish!)

Incidentally, the Michael line crosses one of Wilf's lines at Avebury. The exact spot is marked by a huge stone with a seat carved into it. It is a great place to carry a beer from The Red Lion, as the stone faces the mid- day sun at its zenith and can be a very empowering place to sit (please remember to take your beer glass back to the pub afterwards). Dowzers have much success in tracing these energy lines, so it is worth learning their techniques to find the most powerful places to attune to your beer. 'Beer energy nodes.'

If you have developed a degree of sensitivity, you will feel the energy of beer lines as a distinctly wobbly sensation as if you have just had a bottle of Stouidt's Abbey Triple (9%) on an empty stomach. When you find a really strong power point, you may suddenly find yourself incapable of standing and be caught up in a swirling vortex of energy that throws you to the ground. and breadth of the land.

Once you have identified a suitable spot, remain spread•eagled on the ground like a starfish and attune to it. Ignore passing comments like "Earth-hugger” or “p•artist”. Lie there until the dizziness wears off, then you can connect to the Earth’s power pulse and expand your consciousness to that of the planet. When you are at one with the planet, your aura will be roughly 25,000 miles in diameter. You will have grown in spiritual stature accordingly.

Reprinted from the Journal of the British Society of Dowsers, April 2009

Do you know Jesus Well?

A group of British dowsers decided to explore the site of the Jesus Well between Rock and Polzeath on the north coast of Cornwall. They found a ley line running across the well and two water lines crossing and meeting at the well.

At least five energy lines cross and mingle at the well site, which produce an energy spiral that almost encircles the protective wall. As with such an obviously powerful place they asked if there was a ‘manifestation’ of the type sometimes detected by Hamish Miller - and they were rewarded with the discovery of a twelve pointed star shape. Physically the place was well care for and in another time would have been, a pilgrimage site of some significance.

A lady stopped to talk to the dowsers and to ask about dowsing. She told us that a relative of hers, who lived locally, had once been asked by a couple of ‘hippies’, “Do you know Jesus Well?”

To which she had replied “Not intimately!”

Dowsing can be fun!

Object Found - Dowsing by Telephone

by Jasun Light reprinted from the American Society of Dowsers, Volume 48 - No. 2 - Spring 2008

Anyone who ever doubted the validity of dowsing for lost objects, let this true story eliminate those doubts once and for all. I write this story to open dowsers' minds to the infinite possibilities that dowsing holds, so long as we approach it with the utmost respect, responsibility, and reverence.

I am a novice at dowsing. Four or five years ago I heard a few recordings by Harold McCoy, and later went to a beginners workshop led by Walt Woods. Dowsing was something that intrigued me from the start. Initially, though, I thought of it as an interesting topic for investigation, but not a practice I was interested in pursuing myself. Not, that is, until I lost something very precious and dear to me. It was a one of a kind rock artifact, a natural object I found in Colorado some twenty years ago, an object I had lovingly polished for hours on end.

From time to time I had been attending my local dowsing chapter meetings to find out what they might have to say about higher levels of consciousness. Being a big fan of psychology, philosophy, and mysticism, I found the dowsing community to be friendly and very open to “rubber-neckers” like myself, who stick their necks inside the meetings to see what is going on, yet haven't plucked up enough courage to jump in feet first.

Well, all that changed because of my missing rock treasure. You see, some two and a half years ago, I changed residences. I put some of my possessions in storage, and kept many precious things at my apartment, including my rock piece and quite a number of books.

Then one day, it occurred to me that it had been some time since I had seen my rock object. Where was it? Was it in storage? Did my ex-wife have it? If it was in my apartment, why couldn't I find it? I looked high and low for two or three days, everywhere "important" where I would keep such a valuable object. Where could it be? My frustration mounted.

Then I remembered. I should get a dowser to find it. I got out my address book and made some initial enquiries, asking for the name of a dowser who specialises in finding lost objects. The answer was a nice lady by the name of Marge Hefty. I had spoken with her occasionally at the chapter meetings, but still, I barely knew her. I gave her a call.

"Hi Marge, you may not remember me, but this is Jasun Light. I was wondering if you could please do me a huge favor, and dowse for a lost object for me? It holds a lot of emotional and sentimental value for me, and I don't know where it is. It could be at my ex-wife's house, it could be at my place, I really don't know. Can you please help me?"

"Hang on, let me get my pendulum," Marge replied. Then she asked her Dowsing System, "May I, Can I, Should I", Yes, yes, and yes.

Marge came back on the phone. "OK, I can do it, just tell me how big it is." I told her, "It's only about half the size of the palm of your hand". (That was the only information I gave her about what it was).

Then, while working over the phone, Marge proceeded to ask her Dowsing System a series of questions. "Is it at his ex-wife's house?" No. "Is it at his apartment?" Yes. "Is it in his living room?" No. "Is it in his dining room?" No. "Is it in his kitchen?" No. "Is it in the spare bedroom?" No. "Is it in his master bedroom?" Yes. Then she asked me where the door was to the bedroom. I told her it was in the Southeast corner of the master bedroom.

Marge continued asking her Dowsing System, "Is it on the East wall?" No. "Is it on the West wall?" No. "Is it on the North wall?" No. "Is it on the South wall?" Yes. "Is it on the floor?" No. "Is it one foot off of the floor?" No. "Is it two feet off of the floor?” Yes. Marge stopped the Dowsing session, and told me what she found out. “Your lost object is in your master bedroom, on the South wall, two feet above the floor.” I thanked her, and told her that if it was there, I would send her a bouquet of flowers. I relaxed myself, to take my mind off of it for a while. And then about 15 minutes later, I was ready to go have a look.

I went into the master bedroom. On the South side of the wall, there is a nightstand, which is about two feet tall. There on the nightstand was a huge pile of books, probably twenty or more, all piled up. I slowly removed the books, one by one. And there, on the nightstand, at the bottom of the pile, was my rock object! My jaw-dropped open, and I couldn't believe my eyes.

“Oh my God!” I was speechless. Needless to say, I was on my knees saying a silent prayer of thanks and extreme gratitude to the Field of Infinite Intelligence that makes dowsing possible. After I had managed to integrate what actually had just happened, I let myself calm down for ten minutes, then called Marge Hefty back on the phone and said, “Oh My God, Thank you, thank you, thank you!” My gratitude to Marge was deeper than mere words could express.

I asked her how it works. She gave me a brief explanation, saying that my superconscious mind knew where it was all along. She simply and politely asked her superconscious mind to communicate with mine, and her Dowsing System gave her the answers through the micro movements of her fingers and the physical evidence of the pendulum, swinging in the correct direction. Several leading dowsers have told me that there is nothing mysterious about it. It is simply another normal altered state of consciousness in which the brain is operating simultaneously across all brain wave frequencies, and working in a zone of optimum performance. This altered state is something that anyone can learn to utilize with practice and profound humility.

Being a novice at dowsing, I am not about to try to explain anything further than that. All I know is that dowsing works! And for any skeptics out there, all they need is to experience it first hand, and they will fall silent.

I always believed that dowsing works. Now I know it works because I have first hand experience.

I have taken a serious interest in dowsing, attending the Southwest Dowsing Conference, held in Flagstaff Arizona in 2007, and making some new friends within the dowsing community. I want to develop my own dowsing skills, but only with the greatest respect, responsibility, and reverence for this awesome gift from the universe.

I know I have only had a glimpse of what dowsing can do. But I firmly believe the amount of help we can receive from the Field of Infinite Intelligence is limited only by our beliefs and our capacity to ask the proper questions on behalf and for the benefit of all creation.

Here's my call to action to anyone who reads this article: ask your Dowsing System to help you and others, and start teaching these skills to the younger generation so that we can bring new disciples into this ancient art. And let us pray that they will use it with the highest of ethics to build a better world for all.

Quote of the day

People often say that “beauty is in the eye of the beholder,” and I say that the most liberating thing about beauty is realizing that you are the beholder.
This empowers us to find beauty in places where others have not dared to look, including inside ourselves.

Bull's-Eye!

*by Jim Kuebelbeck reprinted from The American Society of Dowsers
Volume 48 - No. 2 - Spring 2008*

About ten years ago, I was asked to locate a drilling site (by dowsing) for a rural family who already had well dug on their property. The well produced only a marginal water supply, and for years, especially in dry seasons, water usage had to be carefully managed. They were building a new home and realized they would need a more productive water source. The property was located in an area known for difficulty in locating satisfactory groundwater supplies. Two dry holes had recently been drilled on the property, and the well driller suggested that the owner call us to try to locate a suitable drilling site.

Using the dowsing methods we had developed over the years, we could find only one live-water flow on the property. We followed the path of this flow and marked it on the surface as it meandered across the property. We selected a specific site where we believed a satisfactory well could be drilled. Before we left the property, we told the landowner to permanently mark the site because, in my judgment, it seemed to be the only promising site I could find.

We always keep detailed records of every dowsing job. Two years later, however, while paging through some of my old records, I discovered that I had never recorded the results of the drilling on this particular piece of property. I decided to call the landowner and ask about the well. “You know” he said, “after you were here we began to get more rain, and we decided to use the old well after all. We figured we could always drill a new well if we had to. Since then, except for a few times, we’ve always had enough water for the new house, and we’ve been getting by okay”.

I thanked him for the information and made a note of it in my files. Three more years passed. One day in early spring he called again, and asked if I could come out to his property and locate another drilling site, because the dug well was no longer providing enough water for the house and he now had to drill a well. I asked if he had marked the site I previously selected, because that was the only promising site I could find at the time. He told me he had marked the site by driving a heavy wooden stake into the ground, but with all the excavating for the new home, it must have been moved or buried. I told him I would return as soon as possible. When I arrived at the farm some days later, I discovered that everything had changed. The new house was under construction, but many of the old farm buildings had been torn down, and new sheds had been built.

I spent a few minutes trying my best to recall my previous visit. To save some time, I asked if he remembered generally where the site was that I selected previously. He said he had a rough idea, but couldn't be sure, because they had changed everything around, (including the original location for the new house).

I started to work in the yard area, and soon found what seemed to be a good live-water flow and began to mark it out on the surface. As I was working, he told me he didn't think my markings were anywhere near what I had found before, which puzzled me. Groundwater flows never move. I was confident I was sensing what I usually look for, but he persisted by saying, "I know this isn't anywhere near where you found it last time!" I told him that from past experience, I had never known a live-water flow to move and that I didn't have any good explanation for what I was now finding.

The winter snows were fast disappearing at the time, and the ground was beginning to thaw. After working for a while, I decided to follow my instincts, and selected a new drilling site. I spray painted a blue circle on the ground and told him to mark the site in such a way that the markings would not be lost again. He told me to wait right there.

Coming back with a spade, he told me it would be permanently marked “this time by digging a hole in the ground”! Shoving the spade into the soft muddy ground he encountered a small rock, or what he thought was a rock, and tried to dig it out. His next words were, “well, I’ll be damned! This is the stake I put in the ground the last time you were here!” He couldn’t believe it, and neither could I.

A good well was drilled a few days later. I will bet, however, that he still tells this story to anyone who’ll listen. I seldom miss, but if I were Robin Hood, I would consider this the arrow that split the arrow in the bull’s eye.

Register of Dowzers

Would you like to be listed as an active dowzer who can undertake dowsing services?

The Society is occasionally asked for dowsing and clearing services. So far these have mainly been referred to long-standing members, but we would like to compile a list of members who may be available for dowsing services, and who may charge fees for them.

You will need to be a competent dowzer and a person of upright character.

If so, please leave your contact details with the President or Secretary.

Please note: The Society cannot take responsibility for activities by its members.

Installing LOVE / With Tech Support

- Tech Support: Yes, ... how can I help you?
- Customer: Well, after much consideration, I've decided to install LOVE. Can you guide me through the process?
- Tech Support: Yes. I can help you. Are you ready to proceed?
- Customer: Well, I'm not very technical, but I think I'm ready. What do I do first?
- Tech Support: The first step is to open your Heart. Have you located your Heart?
- Customer: Yes, but there are several other programs running now. Is it okay to install Love while they are running?
- Tech Support: What programs are running?
- Customer: Let's see... I have Past Hurt, Low Self-Esteem, Grudge, and Resentment running right now.
- Tech Support: No problem, Love will gradually erase Past Hurt from your current operating system. It may remain in your permanent memory but it will no longer disrupt other programs. Love will eventually override Low Self-Esteem with a module of its own called High Self-Esteem. However, you have to completely turn off Grudge and Resentment. Those programs prevent Love from being properly installed. Can you turn those off?
- Customer: I don't know how to turn them off. Can you tell me how?
- Tech Support: With pleasure. Go to your start menu and invoke Forgiveness. Do this as many times as necessary until Grudge and Resentment have been completely erased.
- Customer: Okay, done! Love has started installing itself. Is that normal?

- Tech Support: Yes, but remember that you have only the base program. You need to begin connecting to other Hearts in order to get the upgrades.

- Customer: Oops! I have an error message already. It says, "Error - Program will not run on external components." What should I do?

- Tech Support: Don't worry. It means that the Love program is set up to run on Internal Hearts, but has not yet been run on your Heart. In non-technical terms, it simply means you have to Love yourself before you can Love others.

- Customer: So, what should I do?

- Tech Support: Pull down Self-Acceptance; then click on the following files: Forgive-Self; Realize Your Worth; and Acknowledge your Limitations.

- Customer: Okay, done.

- Tech Support: Now, copy them to the 'My Heart' directory. The system will overwrite any conflicting files and begin patching faulty programming. Also, you need to delete Verbose Self-Criticism from all directories and empty your Recycle Bin to make sure it is completely gone and never comes back.

- Customer: Got it. Hey! My heart is filling up with new files. Smile is playing on my monitor and Peace and Contentment are copying themselves all over My Heart. Is this normal?

- Tech Support: Sometimes. For others it takes awhile, but eventually everything gets it at the proper time. So LOVE is installed and running. One more thing before we hang up. LOVE is Freeware. Be sure to give it and its various modules to everyone you meet. They will in turn share it with others and return some cool modules back to you.

- Customer: Thank you, so much !

The Easter Egg Origin

The Eastern tradition relates, that after the Ascension, Mary Magdalene travelled to Rome and she was admitted to the court of Tiberius Caesar because of her high social standing.

She proclaimed to him about Christ's Resurrection. She used an egg as a symbol of the Resurrection. Tiberius responded that no one could rise from the dead, anymore than the egg she held could turn red.

Miraculously, the egg immediately began to turn red as testimony to her words, which is why red eggs have been exchanged at Easter for centuries in the Byzantine East.

From this came the custom of giving each other eggs at Easter.

A Big Thank You

Trevor Harding who had printed the newsletter for us for the last few years has agreed to continue printing it, as we could not find anyone else suitable for this demanding technical job.

On behalf of the Society, the Editorial Board wants to express their gratitude to Trevor for continuing to accept this responsibility and for his commitment to the Society.

Qigong – Improving your quality of life.

Qigong (Chi-Kung) has been used for thousands of years to help improve people's quality of life; it's a part of the holistic system of Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM). The dynamic forms and stillness meditation help regulate the meridian system, releasing stress, increase health and longevity as well as developing spiritual perception and awareness.

Simon Blow had a near fatal accident at the age of nineteen led Simon to investigate various methods of healing and rejuvenation. A path he has been on for over twenty five years.

He is a Sydney-based master teacher (Laoshi) who has been leading regular classes for beginning and continuing students since 1992. Simon has received training and certification from Traditional Chinese Medical Hospitals and Taoist Monasteries in China and has been given authority to share these techniques.

He has received World Health Organisation Certification in Medical Qigong clinical practice from the Xiyuan Hospital in Beijing.
