

Dowsers Society of NSW Inc.

Newsletter

August 2018

Vol 30 Issue 8

Table of Contents

|    |   |
|----|---|
| 2  | August 19th, 2018 - Steven & Evan Strong  |
| 3  | From the Editor                           |
| 4  | Sharing a Horse's Opinion                 |
| 11 | One Life, One Story to Tell               |
| 13 | Age is Just a Number                      |
| 16 | Quotations                                |
| 17 | Dowsing the Conscious Cosmos              |
| 20 | Using a Pendulum to Put Out a Forest Fire |
| 23 | Recollections of a Dowser                 |
| 25 | Library News                              |
| 26 | September 16th, 2018 - Mary Masselos      |

Views expressed in articles are the opinion of the individual writer only, not necessarily the collective view of the Society.

Speakers for August 19th, 2018

Steven & Evan Strong

- Skulls that Rewrite History -

This is a shorter version of our talk given at the Nexus Conference in Brisbane.

Our major focus is on four skulls we have recently examined, two are still on site, two are in our possession. The unresolved problem that these skulls create is at least three have no Earthly equivalent.

Two skulls do not have foreheads, there is nothing above the eyebrow ridges, the skull cases slope backwards at 180 degrees and greater, are semi-rectangular and both have massive eyes which are the largest ever seen. Another skull has no evidence of suturing which means it cannot be classified as hominin or sapien.

Complementing these developments, some extremely compelling evidence has turned up that absolutely proves that the Standing Stones site is legitimate, and there was a first language on this continent that predates all other languages ever spoken.

Quite a few loose ends have been tied up, and even the Courier Mail will have to concede their official denial of the site, and the archaeologist was completely wrong, and should be publicly retracted.

From the Editor

The conversation around the table had spanned quite a few topics already, exploring concepts and discussing their validity, when the subject drifted to heaven and hell.

One person remarked that we had very complex and well-defined views of hell; an unpleasant place, famously described in detail in Dante's Divine Comedy 'Inferno' and portrayed at length, particularly in the Renaissance paintings by Hans Memling, Fra Angelico and others.

Heaven by contrast was described as simple. Basically you get assigned a little cloud, given a harp and you play there for ever. It seems that people who painted these, had spent more time in hell than in heaven.

Then someone raised their hand and said "What if?" We all listened.

What if heaven was a place where, you could dig a small hole in the ground, drop a little seed, and later a tree would grow there and you could grab a fruit from that tree and eat it? What if heaven was where you could build things and try them out? What if heaven was a place where you could just sit and watch the moon rise over the ocean?

A place where you could have a child and hold his little hand in yours and hug and point and show "can you see the moon in the sky", where you could sing to him that sweet song and watch him slowly close his eyes in the comfort of your love.

What if it was a place where you could swim in the ocean and feel the water and the sun on your body, the sand under you?

What if we are in heaven now, but we are not opening our eyes and looking at it for what it is: a magical world where everything is possible because we have a body, and free will to do anything?

The room was still, we all listened mesmerised. I realised that heaven is here for me. I have to awaken, open my eyes to fully enjoy it.

I will meet you there. Until next time,

François

Sharing a Horse's Opinion

(Bill Northern shares a horse's opinion with anyone who cares to listen)

By Beth Rasin

The Chronicle of the Horse, October 2002

While attending one of the HITS Culpeper (Va.) horse shows last summer, Mark Leone shared some shade with 'a very unassuming, nice gentleman' one afternoon. Leone enjoyed talking with the quiet, southern accented man, but when he said he was an animal communicator, Leone was leery.

"I had no experience with any kind of communication with animals," said Leone, who ventured a try with his horses anyway. "I found most of his insights into the horses almost eerily spooky. He was pretty darn close to right on, and he didn't know me or my horses. For a fellow like me who's a pretty black and white guy, it's intriguing."

Leone, of Oakland, N.J., now considers Bill Northern a close friend and has put numerous other trainers in touch with him. "I don't know how or why it works, but I'm not going to question it; I just go with it," said Leone.

Northern, 64, of Warsaw, Va., isn't completely sure how his abilities work, either. He didn't discover his talents until he'd retired from running a paper supply business and office supply store. But the signs were always there. In the second grade, Northern's teacher sent home a report card that said "Bill can't keep up with the rest of the class because all he's interested in is his book of magic tricks."

"I'd lost my father when I was 7, and I was doing all I could to bring him back," said Northern, who wrote his school papers about the paranormal or metaphysical whenever possible. "Even today, if I pick up a book [that's what I like to read]. I'm now reading The 'End Of Time' by an English physicist."

Northern approaches animal communication through dowsing, which is the age-old art of finding water with a divining rod, or pendulum, as Northern uses.

He learned that he could dowse by accident, when the septic line at his store stopped up. He couldn't get a plumber and called the town office.

"They came out with plans and dug, and the sewer wasn't there," he recalled. "Finally, the town sent someone out with dowsing rods. I was getting reactions from the rods and I got all excited. I went to the library the next day and started reading."

Northern found a society of dowsers and attended their 1994 convention. "They had horses at the convention and were asking them questions, like does this horse like women, or does this horse like to jump," he said. "I wasn't getting anything, but I saw all these people from New York who didn't know anything about horses doing it. I said if they can do it, then I can."

Northern, who'd owned Standardbred race horses, kept practicing. At the encouragement of his friend Fred Fletcher, in New Zealand, where Northern spends his winters, he started doing six to eight horses a day. "Pretty soon the people in his barn were wanting to know when the Yank with the crystal was going to be there," he recalled with a laugh.

A Thorough Conversation

Northern begins each conversation by asking the horses if they are on a balanced diet or if they have any internal problems. "I don't solve that; I just tell the vet where it is," he said. "And I can tell if a rider is balanced, or what they need to do differently, or if the saddle fits. The only thing I need to know up front is if there is a behavioural problem, because those need to be negotiated."

He said he does this by “leaving this physical body (through your spirits) and communicating on a subconscious level. They’ve done brainwave tests on people doing this. For years, we always thought that when dowsing, the ‘awake’ part of your mind shut down and that you just went over to the other part. But in the last few years, they’ve found by putting brainwave sensors on dowsers, that our whole mind becomes active. Instead of going to sleep, like we thought, it goes crazy! Which is probably why you get so tired doing it.”

Leone’s Grand Prix horse Casino told Leone, via Northern, that the veteran rider was off balance and needed to shorten his left stirrup. “I checked, and my stirrups were uneven! He also said that sometimes I don’t make it clear where I’m going, that I need to tell him,” said Leone. “People might think I’m crazy, so I chat with him confidentially. Those are just some of the little things I’ve been doing with him that are quite handy.”

Pinkata De Longpre, who Leone plans on riding in the World Equestrian Games selection trials, told Leone that his job was easy, but that Leone needed to be more in synch with him. Bill told me I’ve got to practice with him more, that I’ve been saving him, and that’s true. I’m an under-trainer and ultra conservative. Every time I get on him I’m nervous; there is tremendous pressure to do well every time, and I don’t want to hurt him. I never really practiced on him; I just went to shows, and the horse was picking up on me being tense, too. Those are two situations where I found he gave useful, helpful insight.

Leone has Northern go over most of his horses at shows. It’s another tool to help incorporate into the whole process, Northern, the blacksmith, grooms, vet, it’s a whole collaboration process.

Candice King, of Wellington, Fla., enjoyed a second-placed finish aboard Quintin at the $50,000 Budweiser Upperville Grand Prix (Va.) in June of 2002 after consulting Northern the day before. “There was an area on his shoulder that was sore, that needed liniment and rubbing, and it’s not a spot you would normally notice,” she said. “He jumped super the next day, and I think Northern helped to get him to where he was that day.”

Bob Crandall, a hunter/jumper trainer in Baltimore, Md., said Northern gave him some insights into what some of his horses were and weren't happy about, and Crandall accommodated his horses' requests. "This is a hard subject, because there is so much skepticism, including me, yet he had so many interesting things to say and came up with things out of the blue, and you'd say, 'How did he know that?'" recalled Crandall.

"I'm very open to things, willing to try," he added. "You never know where you're going to get an insight. I would definitely recommend someone trying this, especially if you're at your wit's end and don't know what to do with a certain horse."

Everyone in Crandall's barn enjoyed watching Northern ask the horses who their favourite grooms were. He hit it on the head with each one, he went right to the person that horse was being cared for by or who had a way with him, and that interested me a lot.

Northern's mannerisms gave Crandall his trust. "He's an incredibly nice man-very quiet. He's always been very supportive and kind about everything, and he's obviously interested, because he's not getting rich off it. He has a very kind way about him and this really interests me; I do think there are people out there capable of this."

But if you aren't sure you want to know the answer to a question, cautioned Northern, don't ask. He doesn't 'sugarcoat' the answers the animals give him. "I'm fortunate not to have to do this for a living, so I can tell people like it is," he said. "I don't have to tell them what they want to hear."

Northern charges $50 per animal, and although he doesn't need the money, he said the work is exhausting, and if he didn't charge something, his phone would be ringing off the hook (from people, not horses).

Northern insists that horses (and other animals) can understand what people say. They know exactly what you are thinking, and if you're not saying what you're thinking, they know that. We're communicating telepathically with them. They know if you're thinking about selling them, and they know your problems and your joys. Material things aren't important to horses, as most people would guess. If you get a new car, what's the big deal?

They don't put the same value on things that we do. One guy asked me to tell his horse how much he appreciates the million dollars the horse had won, and the horse said he'd just like it if he'd get an apple now and then.

A New Outlook

For Northern, who never learned to do more with a horse than sign his trainer's checks, communicating with them has given him a perspective he'd never imagined. "Before, the horse had to please me," he said. "Now I realize that doesn't happen; you have to ask them. I could go to a fence with a barrel of apples and they wouldn't come to me [before]. Now I go with my pendulum, and they're all there. I never realized they had such feelings and thoughts; I thought they were just dumb animals."

"A lot of people are raised to really pay attention to animals," he added. "They know what every look and movement means, and I will never be able to do that. But I see things with my eyes closed that they miss."

When he owned Standardbreds, Northern said he threw away $300,000-$400,000 on horses who weren't going to make it. "It's such a gift now to be able to look at a horse and see if they're going to make it," he said. "When I learned to do this," I said, "Won't it be nice to keep people from buying those horses that aren't going to work out. And now I can find out if a trainer is trying to pull something over on me!"

Northern can tell if a horse's hocks have just been injected or if something has been done to make the horse sound. "I've had a fair amount of people buy a horse my angels don't particularly care for, but they'll never buy the second one," he said with a smile. "It may take 20 horses, but once they find the right one, it's a marriage made in heaven. It's important to have a horse like you; they try harder."

Ironically, Northern's abilities have also made it too frustrating to own race horses. "I'd get too mad at a trainer now," he said with a smile. "I'd be too bossy."

However, he did purchase a yearling in New Zealand who was telling him how she could really jump high. He plans to find a trainer for her in the U.S. when she is older. "When you go to the track, the horses have a good idea of who can win, but the trainers and riders screw it up," he said.

While at Colonial Downs (Va.) once, Northern came across a horse who said he could win, but that his jockey was going to hold him in the back of the pack. Northern told the trainer that the horse wanted to be up front. But the trainer insisted that the horse had won on the front before, and the jockey would never hold him in the back.

The next day, Northern got a call. "The trainer said, 'You know, that S.O.B. did just what you said,'" recalled Northern with a laugh. While Northern has helped many riders, he ultimately does his work for the horses. "I want people to understand that they don't have to put a horse down because they can't understand it-because it rears or bucks or won't jump," he said. "I'm helping people and animals-putting them together and helping them to understand each other, to make a partnership."

I have a great respect for Bill; he is one heck of a tremendous guy, he gives me a great deal of confidence when I talk to him, and we're all always grasping for that. I don't know if it's the twinkle in his eye, his accent... something. When I won the grand prix in Culpeper, he had tears in his eyes, and I'd just met him. That really meant something to me.

Saving Lives And Finding Fugitives

Bill Northern uses his ability to dowse for answers from 'his Angels' for many things other than speaking to animals. Most notably, he saved his own life during a cerebral haemorrhage. His wife Ann, who works as a clerk at the health department, rushed Northern to the hospital, where he was met by a neurologist who told him a neurosurgeon was standing by. But Northern, as usual, was patient.

The neurologist explained to him that his red blood cells were "shorting out my brain and that the surgeon could help clear them," said Northern. "I told him that my angels could also do that, and he agreed that if I could visualize it carefully they could do it."

Amazingly, the neurologist didn't dismiss him. "The next morning when his associate came in and I told him what the doctor had told me the night before, he had a hard time believing it," added Northern, who was out of the hospital 48 hours later. While he took months to recuperate, he avoided a procedure that few patients survive.

Northern used to help his next-door neighbour, a now retired state police trooper, find lost people. He usually tracked the person or body in question to within a few miles of where it was eventually found. He's even tracked the most famous missing person - Osama bin Laden.

"He's in China," said Northern with certainty. "He doesn't have nearly the accommodations he did in Afghanistan, but he's very safe."

Of course, Northern did his civic duty by notifying President Bush of his discovery. "I got back a very nice letter, but I'm sure he never read mine," said Northern.

One Life, One Story to Tell

Author unknown

Reprinted from the Canadian Society of Questers, Summer 2018

You know, time has a way of moving quickly and catching you unaware of the passing years. It seems just yesterday that I was a young girl/boy, just married and embarking on my new life with my mate.

And yet in a way, it seems like eons ago, and I wonder where all the years went. I know that I lived them all... And I have glimpses of how it was back then and of all my hopes and dreams... But, here it is...The winter of my life and it catches me by surprise...

How did I get here so fast?

Where did the years go and where did my babies go? And where did my youth go? I remember well... seeing older people through the years and thinking that those older people were years away from me and that winter was so far off that I could not fathom it or imagine fully what it would be like...

But, here it is... husband retired and he's really getting grey... he moves slower and I see an older man now. He's in much better shape than me... but, I see the great change... Not the one I married who was dark and young and strong... but, like me, his age is beginning to show and we are now those older folks that we used to see and never thought we'd be.

Each day now, I find that just getting a shower is a real target for the day! And taking a nap is not a treat anymore... it's mandatory! Cause if I don't on my own free will... I just fall asleep where I sit!

And so, now I enter into this new season of my life unprepared for all the aches and pains and the loss of strength and ability to go and do things.

But, at least I know, that though the winter has come, and I'm not sure how long it will last... This I know, that when it's over...its over.... Yes, I have regrets.

There are things I wish I hadn't done.... things I should have done .... But indeed, there are many things I'm happy to have done .... It's all in a lifetime... So, if you're not in your winter yet, let me remind you, that it will be here faster than you think. So, whatever you would like to accomplish in your life please do it quickly!

Life goes by quickly ...So, do what you can today, because you can never be sure whether this is your winter or not! You have no promise that you will see all the seasons of your life... so, live for good today and say all the things that you want your loved ones to remember...

“Life is a gift to you. The way you live your life is your gift to those who came after. Make it a fantastic one.”

LIVE IT WELL!!

-Author unknown-

Age is Just a Number!

By Colleen Cannon

Reprinted from the Journal of the Ozark Research Institute, Summer 2018

Have you ever heard that age is just a number? Truly, think about that. For thousands of years in human history, there was no concept of keeping track of this illustrious word ‘age’.

Our modern society seems to have gone berserk trying to do everything in their power to demonise and fight against the beautiful unfolding of life day by day. There is really no such thing as ‘aging’; the concept is made up. We live each passing day, gaining beauty, wisdom, strength, and depth along the way. Believe it or not, I have actually gotten more fit and strong as I’ve gotten older ... and not to mention, heaps smarter!

I look at it this way, I now have a huge base of experience that I can draw from. This base allows me to take short cuts where I know they’re beneficial, become more efficient in order to savour what I love, avoid drama at all costs, and navigate day to day life more confidently. To live life full throttle I don’t take anything personally or care what others think. I just don’t!

Here are my Aging backwards secrets:

1) Celebrate. Find something, however small it may be, in each and every moment to celebrate. We all love celebrations and guess what - Life is the biggest one and you are in it. So close your eyes and feel yourself filling up with joy and gratitude! This is life you are feeling.

2) Meditate. This is the absolute best beauty treatment. One of the most simple ways to begin this process is to sit down in a quiet, comfortable place, close your eyes, and start breathing. A wonderful mantra to adopt is ‘Let Go.’ With each inhale, chant the word ‘let’ in your head, and as you exhale, silently chant ‘go.’ Repeat for several minutes until your breath becomes steady and natural. Keep breathing and see what comes up!

3) Exfoliate. I like to do this daily to my whole body. Exfoliating is crucial for shedding old, dead layers of skin, essentially getting rid of what the body no longer needs and making way for the new cells.

Some of the benefits of exfoliation include detoxification of the skin, brightens the complexion, reveals healthy, younger skin, reduces fine lines and sun damage, improves skin tone, and kills bacteria and prevents breakouts. Keep yourself ageless and fresh with this simple technique!

4) Create.

To keep the brain vital and thriving, create magic and wonder in your daily life. Whether you choose art, music, to learn a new language, start a program for your kids, or any other method of creativity, do something new and exciting every day to exercise our creative minds. It can be as simple as eating with your opposite hand!

5) Lift weights.

Do some kind of weight bearing exercise, including your own body if physical weights are unavailable. Weight lifting increases muscle strength which fights fat, reduces depression symptoms, fights osteoporosis, helps you move with ease, lowers risk of diabetes, improves heart health, supports healthy blood sugar control, prevents back pain, improves balance, makes you mentally stronger, and of course, helps keep you looking fantastic!

6) Levitate.

Get over it or get above it! Stop holding grudges of any kind, forgive your parents, partners, friends, and all those around you. By living in the past and holding grudges, we are only doing damage to weigh ourselves down.

Instead, remind yourself that the past is, the past, and work to rise above it, keeping your heart and spirit light!

7) Marinate.

Savour everything; take time to enjoy the details of life. When something delicious comes your way, be that a warm cup of tea by the fire or a hug from a loved one, marinate in those feelings of warmth and love.

Take the time to watch the clouds go by like you did when you were a child and be filled with wonder, freshness, and new possibilities. Reverting back to this innocent, child-like mind-set will keep your heart and mind young.

8) Dedicate.

We all have passions that we all too often convince ourselves not to follow. This is a challenge to pick something that makes you sing and dedicate yourself to it.

There is no rush to get everything done in a day, a week, or even a month, but commit to something that gets you excited. Work on or towards this project, trip, idea, or goal as much or as little as you can, knowing you're dedicated to joy.

9) Appreciate.

Before you fall asleep at night, tell yourself something you are grateful for. Focus in on this thing, whether it be the softness of your sheets, the roof over your head, a special person in your life, a random stranger that smiled at you, or anything in between.

When we fill our minds with something we are grateful for before we fall asleep, we have planted a seed of positivity and love that has the chance to grow and flourish in the many hours we are asleep. Instead of going over your list of to-do's, or stressing about one thing or another as you fall asleep, let the last thought that crosses your mind be of appreciation.

10) Cultivate.

We usually hear this word in reference to land, 'cultivate your garden'. This process is just as important for our own lives, cultivating our own bodies, homes, careers, and lives to allow the fruits of our labor to grow and flourish. Cultivate yourself with the mentality that how you do anything is how you do everything. Prepare for the goodness that is to come, wait patiently, and know that the blossoms will appear and that they have the proper base to bloom from.

Reprinted from the Women's Quest Blog. They specialize in enriching, rejuvenating adventures to renew the spirit and strengthen the body. Find out more at www.WomensQuest.com

Quotations

Gratitude is a currency that we can mint for ourselves, and spend without fear of bankruptcy.

-Fred De Witt Van Amburgh

Piglet noticed that even though he had a Very Small Heart, it could hold a rather large amount of Gratitude.

-A.A. Milne

Gratitude can transform common days into thanksgivings, turn routine jobs into joy, and change ordinary opportunities into blessings.

-William Arthur Ward

Dowsing the Conscious Cosmos

By Tim Walter

Reprinted from The American Dowser, Summer 2016

Dowsing seems to be the easiest way to literally access part of the quantum layer of existence in our realities.

You may have seen the photograph that NASA astronauts Scott Kelly and Tim Peake took from the Space Station in January 2016.

Most of us aren't lucky enough to witness the amazing visual display of the aurora during our lives, let alone such a dramatic display from such a remarkable viewpoint. It's a heart-stopping and lump-in-the-throat inducing image.

Dowsing can, on occasion, induce similar feelings of awe. Yes, seriously. Some of the experiences that I have found while dowsing are almost as breathtaking. They too have an ability to stop one short and even change a view of life on earth. OK, well, I may be taking the similarity a little far, but when one accesses and feels what can only be described as 'angelic energy' for the first time, it is a remarkable experience and something of an emotional shock.

Dowsing is incredibly easy to do, but many people get frustrated by it because as one practices there is inevitably a phase where one's dowsing appears to stop working, and the novice dowser is left wondering why their results appear to make no sense. These are usually times when the beginner dowser has asked the same question twice and got conflicting results, or they are asking a question about something in the future.

So what? Well, these two scenarios in themselves reveal something about the nature of dowsing and the power of the human mind. First, they are to be welcomed, as this phase signals that you are really on the path to effective dowsing once you get past this stage.

The universe is ready and willing to talk to you and take you by the hand, walking with your subconscious mind via an odd set of sticks or a pendulum.

The 'future' issue can be resolved by being very careful of how one phrases the question and is very specific about where the intent is aimed. The issue here is which of the almost infinite possibilities is the dowser tuning in to in the future?

The future is not set in stone. Even quantum theories from the early 1900s suggest a multi-dimensional universe full of potential.

So be specific when you ask the question and 'dial that code' as accurately as you can to tune in to your most appropriate reality.

Second, the issue with the repeated question: the quantum world is full of something called entangled particles. Entangled particles can be anywhere in the universe and if one affects one particle, the entangled twin reacts also. The polarization of these entangled articles is always opposite.

When a dowser tunes in to a memory or an action of something to find out information about it, they may tune in to entangled particles. If so, they may initially get a "Yes" response. But if they dowse again with the same question, they will tune in to the second entangled particle and get the opposite result. That creates a very confused novice dowser.

The answer to this problem is to slightly change the way the question is framed, as that will realign the intent of the question and find a different target.

Who knew quantum physics could be accessed from the comfort of your own living room?

Dowsing does seem to access the quantum world. And as every dowser knows, the laws of Newtonian physics don't hold in dowsing and yet results are achievable. Witness any professional dowser as they find water or minerals, or track a travelling drug consignment across continents. It's scientifically impossible according to Newton, but not according to the laws of quantum physics.

It seems increasingly likely that as we access what is currently called 'earth energy', we are actually accessing a part of the quantum layer of our reality. It's possible the earth energy lines we find everywhere are actually thicker, more well-defined parts of the structure of our lives.

We know earth energy responds to conscious thought. And so it should. In many ways, it is conscious thought itself - a part of the conscious cosmos here on earth. What can we do with it? Whatever we like, is the answer. Earth energy to me is the visual representation of all self-development and manifestation in action. This is the process by which all those theories actually work. This is how you too can spend time dowsing the conscious cosmos in your own home.

Tim Walter lives in North Yorkshire, UK, and is a transformational life coach using Personal Subtle Energy Management, a Geomancer, and EFT practitioner. Tim's mentor was the late, great Hamish Miller. Once a member of the BSD, Tim founded the Dales Dowzers, runs workshops on psychic development, dowsing, meditation and mindfulness, and gives talks on the power of our subjective realities to heal the self. You can contact Tim through his website: www.knightsrose.com.

Using a Pendulum to Put Out a Forest Fire

By James Gamble

American Society of Dowzers, Spring 2018

I live in California, a state which has a lot of forest and brush fires. Along with our many large cities and towns, California also has vast unpopulated areas, where the big fires pop up and spread like 'wild fire.' By the time the California Forest Service hears of the fires, they may have consumed 100 acres of land. Some of the fires this year have consumed over 80,000 acres of land.

As dowzers, witches, and other energy workers, we regularly work with transformed mental energy to create physical changes in the world. I was sitting in a coffee shop recently with two witches and someone brought up the topic of all the fires that occur in California. Our conversation led to 'what if' we could contain and knock down a forest fire using only the power of our minds.

Once we agreed it was a possibility, we got into the logistics. How many people would it take to make this happen? Would we have to be near the fire? How would the script read? Would a full-scale spell have to be cast? Would a pendulum alone work?

As dowzers we wanted to keep the process simple. Since I can control the weather anywhere in the world from the kitchen it seemed logical that a forest fire could also be controlled from there. The process would not be more powerful by close proximity to the fire.

One of the first things we determined was that it was difficult to find precisely where the fire was actually located.

'Cal Fire', a public agency of the California government, keeps track of fires in California, and publishes the fire location so it can be found on a local map. The county is published as well as the map coordinates.

Finding the actual location on a map was surprisingly difficult when there were no towns on the map to use as a reference point.

On our first effort we did not use map dowsing; instead, we mentally blasted the area where we thought the fire was. The results were what one would expect. Twenty-four hours later the fire was only 50 to 60 percent contained.

When we had an approximate location, we used map dowsing to find the exact location. Using a pendulum took longer to find the location, but it increased the accuracy up to 100%.

The number of practitioners we work with depends on the skill level of the people. The highest number is five people of average ability. It is difficult to contain the mental energy of more than five energy workers. The energy has a tendency to go every which way rather than being controlled and focused in the room, and it can mess up the electronics of computers and cell phones.

Two people of superior mental strength could do the job, or one person with the right abilities. By trial and error we decided that three people was the best number: one man (a dowser and Shaman) and two women (both practicing witches), creating a balance of male and female energy.

We set up the first 'fire solution' in one of our homes. After locating the position of the fire, we drew a triangle on the map, which contained the whole fire. Each of us took one side of the triangle as it was portrayed on the map of the fire. Our approach was a combination of dowsing and spell craft to contain and suppress the fire. The next day we checked the results on the fire map.

My side and one other, 'stopped' the fire. The second witch's barrier was non-existent, and the fire continued up the valley. We used a pendulum to dowse how much energy the third person brought to our approach. It was 0%. She had no power at all! We asked her what kind of spells she really did. None of her work had quantifiable results. She left our group.

We found a new third person for our group, another working witch. We dowsed her mental power in advance and she was 'off the scale'. The next day, we did a 'fire-suppression' on three California fires. Twenty-four hours later all three fires were 100% contained and extinguished. We have documented every fire we have worked on for verification. We can also work on fires anywhere in the United States.

In the next week we tackled five more fires in California. At that time there was a fire in a warehouse in our city of Oakland. One of the women from our group called and asked us to do a fire-suppression on that warehouse. I told her that she could handle it herself, and she knocked the fire down within a few hours.

The fires that we focused on were each more than 1,000 acres and less than 15% contained when we began our work. In 24 hours they each were 100% contained and mostly extinguished. We soon found that doing a fire-suppression was like dowsing for water.

After a maximum of three major fires, we were mentally exhausted and no longer accurate. Since our group can only handle up to three fires at one time, we believe that more energy workers, dowsers, and witches could and should be trained in the technique we are using.

It might even be possible to have 'fire killers' spread around the U.S. to stop all forest and brush fires before they destroy houses or property.

James Gamble is a professional water dowser with 11 years experience. James may be reached by email at tanro@att.net.

Recollections of a Dowser

By Henri Meier

British Society of Dowsers, June 1951

In an article in Radio-Perception for March, 1951, Mr. Clarke has recorded that if he touches a 'non-sensitive' with his rod and then sends him out over a field, he can tell when the non-sensitive crosses underground water without himself going over the ground. His rod reacts as if he had been over the water in person.

It is not necessary for the dowser to touch the other person.

During the year 1937, I gave a representative of the illustrated review 'A-Z' an article and photographs from 'Soir Illustré' about the dowsing activities of the Abbe Bouly, the inventor of the word Radiesthesia.

The Abbe had told the daughter of the proprietor of the castle to go forward. When the young woman came over a subterranean water vein he got a reaction just as if he himself was crossing the vein and at once stated the depth and quantity of water. And so the castle was provided with a supply of water by the 'Father of Radiesthesia!'

When Lieut.-Colonel Moreau was in India, he was driving one day in a motor-car searching for underground streams which he had previously located on a sketch-map in Paris. He instructed his interpreter to tell a Hindu boy to go in a certain direction; when the boy passed over a stream which he had marked on the sketch at a depth of 300 metres, the rod Colonel Moreau was holding gave the characteristic reaction.

I have myself been doing the same sort of thing on occasion during the last 20 years; any person on foot, in a car or on a bicycle, or any animal passing over a stream, causes a reaction to take place in the same way.

There can be no doubt that our body acts as an aerial receiver. We can also project our thoughts - a mentally selected ray on a definite target. If I am travelling by night in a train with a friend through a countryside well known to him, I can tell him whenever we pass over a bridge and any stream, however small.

Fifteen years ago I told Mr. Valentini, of Audunstreet, Esch, that I had located two water pipes under the path in front of his house. I asked him why there were two. He told me there was only one pipe and one meter. But I was not satisfied and having located the main under the street, found two small branch pipes, parallel and six metres apart, at a depth of 130 centimetres.

Mr. Valentini later remembered that many years ago, he had two water meters in his cellar for his lemonade factory.

It is not difficult to locate and trace underground water pipes, and to pick out a pot containing water in a row of covered pots. The element hydrogen causes the reaction of the rod for water. Over a bag of sugar I find first the reaction for water (dip of the rod or seven negative rotations of the pendulum), and then the reaction for carbon (the rod inclining forward at an oblique angle to the earth, or ten positive rotations of the pendulum).

If I have the intention of searching for open water by day or by night I am able to locate it. We dowsers should have no secrets. I am certain that anything on which the dowser concentrates produces an influence on his nerves and muscles. It is a question of extra-sensory perception guided by reflexes. Our science is a physical and a psychic one.

Library News

The Divining Heart: Dowsing and Spiritual Unfoldment

by Patricia C. Wright and Richard D. Wright

Introduction:

Building on the principles and practices presented in The Divining Mind (Richard Wright's first book on dowsing, co-authored by T. Edward Ross II), authors Richard and Pat Wright define dowsing as the 'process of uncovering information through the medium of the self.'

The Wrights believe, as do many dowsers, that the ability to dowse is innate, but they also feel that its proper development is contingent upon the parallel unfoldment of the spiritual qualities in our nature. Through this process, the dowser becomes increasingly cognizant of the inter-connectedness of all aspects of life and begins to play his or her part as an agent of healing and positive change.

Our speaker for July, Anya Petrovic has kindly donated her book to the library, Tesla Metamorphosis, and it is now available.

One of our members has read it and loved it. As a result they will do the Tesla Metamorphosis Seminar later this month. A highly recommended book to read.

-Helen

Speaker for September 16th, 2018

Mary Masselos

- The Transcendent Nature of Cosmic Sound -

The Ancients conceived of the heavenly bodies joining in a cosmic chant as they moved in a stately manner across the sky.

As Mary will demonstrate musically, the innate character and power of the seven tones can promote inner and outer harmony on a personal level.

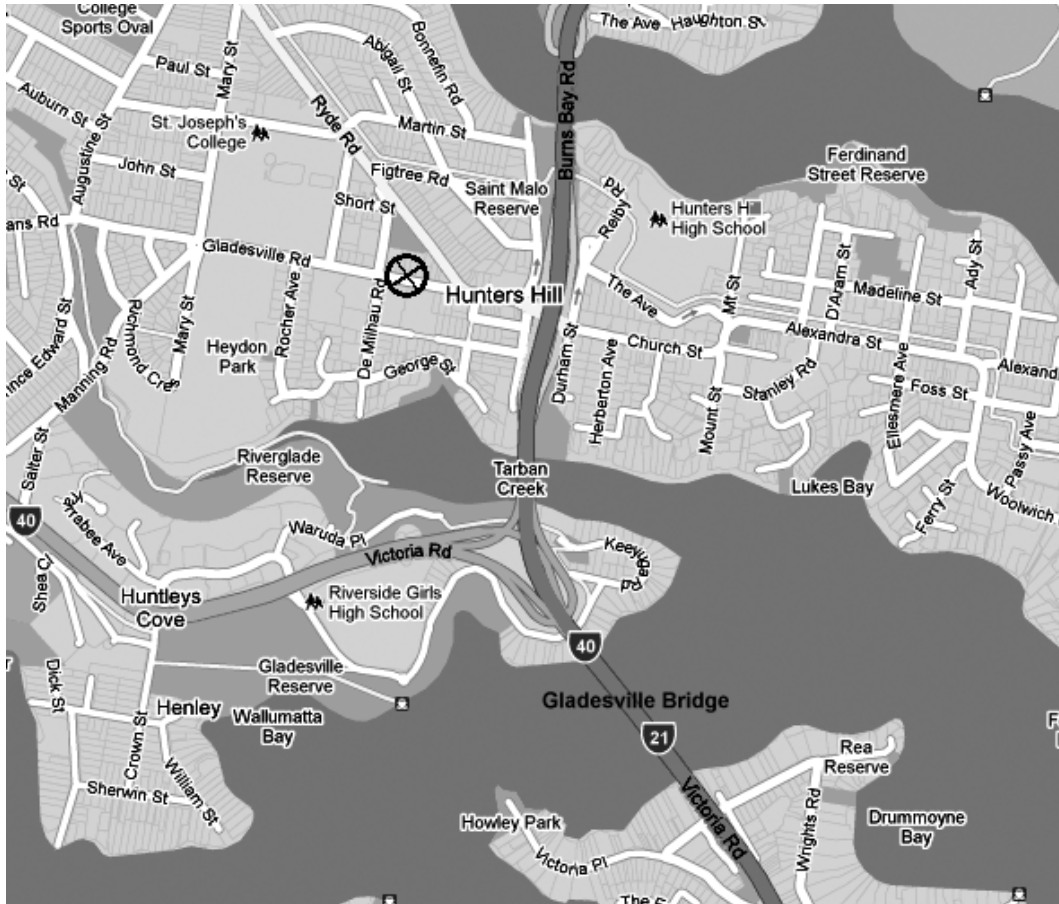

In her early years Mary Masselos had a successful career as a concert violinist. She played in orchestras and as a soloist in Australia, Italy, the United States, England and Holland.

It was during this time that she became aware of the power of individual tones - of their ability to touch spiritual depths - and made the decision to train as a music therapist. She completed a Diploma in Music Therapy at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama, London, followed by a Certificate in Psychodynamic Counselling at the Westminster Pastoral Foundation, London.

Concurrently she worked with Jungian analysts Joel Ryce-Menuhin of London and Aniela Jaffa of Zurich. Both analysts encouraged her to continue with and further develop her method of using the seven tones as a diagnostic and healing tool.

Mary now practises full time in Sydney, where she continues to hold workshops aimed at helping people open themselves to the transformative energy embedded in the spectrum of sound.

Date of Meetings

Third Sunday of every month, except December (2nd Sunday)

Time: 2:00pm to 5:00 pm

Venue for Meetings

Community Hall, 44 Gladesville Road, Hunters Hill

Bus Services: Transport Enquiries: 131 500

- 1. from City Town Hall, Bus # 506 goes from Town Hall House, Drutt St, Stand L, to Gladesville Rd, cnr of Pitt St, Hunters Hill;*
- 2. from Circular Quay, Bus # 506 to Gladesville, corner of Ryde Road, Hunters Hill;*
- 3. from City Station, Central to Rozelle, Bus # 501, then # 506 to Hunters Hill;*
- 4. from Chatswood, Bus # 536 goes to Hunters Hill .*

Please arrive at the meeting early so as not to disturb and be seated by 2:00 pm

Website address: www.dowsingaustralia.com