Martell Spatz

Improving your health with Radiaesthesie & the H3 Antenna

Radiaesthesie (Greek: Sensitivity of field activity, detectable by dowsing)

This month's speaker comes from Germany and is a member of the German Radiaesthesie Society Ltd.

This scientific society was founded in 2005 by a group of scientists, professors and Radiaesthesie enthusiasts to bridge the gap between Science and Radiaesthesie, and to connect and focus the activity of individuals and their research across Germany.

Martell Spatz, longstanding member and passionate dowser, will be speaking about human frequencies and their use to improve health and dis-ease. Martell will present the H3 Antenna (formerly “Lecher Antenna”) and its use to collect and record the frequencies of disharmony in the human body for further use and therapy.

For the President

Due to fortunate circumstances, our President is not willing or able to provide an article this month. He is probably on a beach with a georgious woman, somewhere in the sunny Bahamas ....

On Thursday 28 January, Noel and the lovely Angela tied the knot in front of a cheering crowd of friends. Present at the large reception held at 'Bishopgate', the home of Noel and Angela's mutual friends in Bowral, were a number of members of the Dowsers Society.

Your Editorial Board reporting crew has caught a few glimpses of the happy couple to present to you here.

The Society sends their best wishes and regards to the definitely happy couple.

Farewell to Hamish Miller

Hamish Miller left his body on the 26th of January, 2010.

He celebrated Burns Night in England, with close family, and died peacefully.

Francois met Hamish last year in Cornwall, where Hamish was extremely generous with his time, and gave Francois the ley line maps he had spent 15 years, with fellow writer Paul Broadhurst, to research and compile.

Hamish was an important British dowsing figure and writer of many books. He was instrumental in the re-discovery of the Mary & Michael and Apollo & Athena ley lines, which he traced all the way from Skellig St Michael, in Ireland, to Armageddon, in Israel. He initiated a Parallel Community movement, bringing together people and groups worldwide.

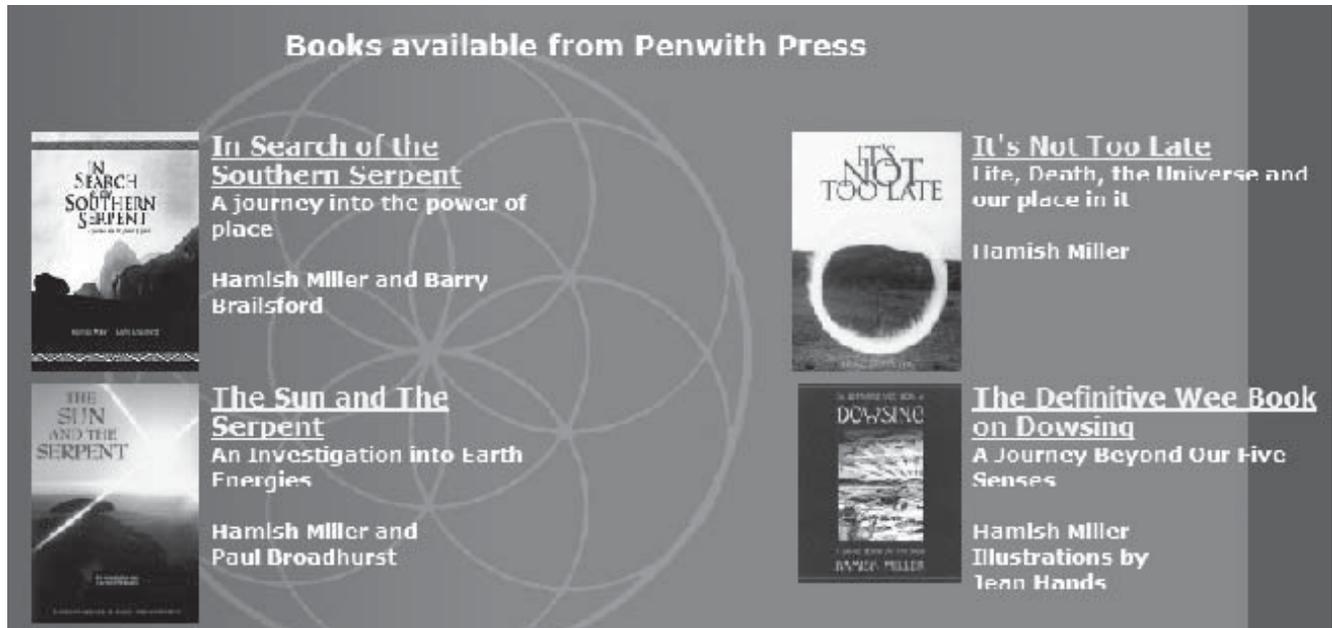

The Parallel Community is a linking network and a platform where people can express and develop their positive contribution for change - human, social, ecological and spiritual.

You will find more on his website : <http://www.parallelcommunity.com/>

Many enjoyed Hamish's warm hospitality. He was a mine of information on ley lines and earth energy.

He will be sadly missed and we send blessings, light and love to wherever his beautiful soul resides.

Some of Hamish's books and videos are listed below

They are available from:

The Dowser's Prayer

*“Lord, guide my hands,
Enhance my sensitivity,
And bless my purpose,
That I may be an instrument
Of Your power and glory
In locating what I search for.
With deep gratitude.*

Dowsing versus Feng Shui

by Clif Sanderson

There's no doubt that studying dowsing gives us a very wide vocabulary and the tools useful in apprehending the fields of energy which permeate the cosmos. But what I think is more important is that we can now define our work in relationship to past generations of dowsers and geomancers. It gives us a unique performer's stage to overlook past and present ideas - those which echo with truth and reality; things so essential in these days of confusion.

The melding of dowsing and feng shui is a very real practicality. Here is my definition:

“Feng shui is the art, science and experience of prospecting for the intrinsic harmonies resident in any environment, be it physical, emotional or mystical.”

We are not talking here about the trinkets found in the crystal shops, not the articles found in women's magazines right after the Monthly Horoscopes, nor many of the books written to serve the economy of the writers, but the profound knowledge, ground and filtered into more than 5000 years of hard, often troubled and confusing human observations.

True feng shui, known as the Form School, began during those centuries when communities consisted almost entirely of farmers or people of the land. Later on, when villages had become towns and cities with universities, and few people knew the skills of the land, Confucius and others developed the Compass School which required education, mathematics and reliance on the directing influence of the compass. Intuition and observation became of little importance. Today, we can use either approach, however, I favour the Form School, as it gives us freedom to exercise our native abilities to fit into any situation, given that there will never be two similar requirements, whatever the questions raised.

That is, using our generally Western biased mind, with its desire to know 'why', 'how' and 'when', we find increased awareness of our surroundings and great pleasure from 'knowing' what to do, led by both dowsing and feng shui hand in hand.

For example, in 2003 I was commissioned by the senior architect of the BBC in London, to investigate why so many of the 4000 staff of the Head Office, in White City were unhappy to be working in that building - a seven-storey monstrosity shaped like a giant square donut. The empty space inside showed no heart, for all the world like the interior of a penitentiary.

I made several recommendations and the Director General and the Financial Director of the BBC accepted my suggestions.

What was interesting to me, was that some of the staff were noticing the changes even before I did anything. Might I suggest that the combination of dowsing and feng shui, in this case was critical.

On another occasion I was invited to lecture on feng shui to the Moscow Institute of Technology. Without a brief I was given free rein to speak of any aspects of the practice.

Imagine my concern when towards the end of the speech, there was a rustle of chatting one listener to the other, however out of politeness I was allowed to finish.

As soon as I had completed the presentation, a group of the professors gathered around me, demanding that I expand on my statement that students, either in their home study room, or in an auditorium, will never reach their full potential if the ceiling over their head has a single slope (a classic feng shui rule). As the room I was speaking in did not have such a faulty ceiling, I was curious why they had got so interested. It transpired that they had, for a long time, noted that when otherwise accomplished students sat exams in one of their large classrooms, which had such a ceiling, they would invariably have much less successful results. Since this was, after all, the Institute of Technology, they immediately decided to form the intention to call in their own experts to have the ceiling remodelled!

These examples serve to illustrate the desire of feng shui to create an atmosphere of balance and harmony. A one-slope ceiling (or roof) is an incomplete geometrical shape; or perhaps an empty space needs to be 'described'. There's nothing mystical about that!

What might take us into the world of the sceptics (that is, to the depths of those who do not understand) might be applied when I was asked to help a (then) new shopping mall on the outskirts of Sydney. The developers were distraught because the foot-count was considerably down on the necessary predicted number.

Several things were 'wrong'. The architects, in a flying expression of steel and engineering had created, in the exact centre of the open space in the heart of the shopping area, two escalators, one up and one down, a gigantic "X" – now you might say what does that mean? Well, doesn't an "X" resonate with failure! Not only that, many people, and this is the sort of realistic aspect required of feng shui, are scared of heights and they would not feel safe on the open-sided escalators. I recommended that huge posters of delightful things (not selling points) disguise the construction.

As it happened there was also a 'no-no'... since right next to the butcher's shop, was a hair salon. This created problems for both shops because if a lady is going for a special hairdo, her mind is on the coming transformation, she does not want to be confronted with a mundane display of meat at that time. In this particular situation, the butcher's use of knives also clashed with the gentle scissors of the hairdresser.

Usually we do recommend that hair dressing shops be free standing, as the continual use of scissors cuts the profits for the surrounding businesses. With one or two other adjustments the management described a large increase of sales.

Of course this practice works in mini, or private, scale as well. In your own house, do the doors hang in ways that allow easy access? Can visitors easily see your front door, or does the garage (i.e. the car) take precedence over their welcome?

Are you having difficulty selling your house even though the location and price are right? Very often only a small adjustment may be needed. Finally, feng shui does allow for a great deal of originality once you grasp the concepts.

In the southern German city of Kalsruhe I was asked to help a man with a family living in a row of semi-detached houses. His wife loved the area and the house itself, but was continually feeling that in some way her life was being restricted.

I asked him if she might be able to go and stay with a friend for a day... she was agreeable. The back garden area was a tiny square lawn with some bushes in pots. What I did was to 'force' the perspective. Instead of the square lawn we shaved the edges so that it tapered towards the back fence. We shifted all the potted plants, which had been casually arranged along both sides, so that the tallest ones were nearer the house, the shorter ones towards the back. We took some irregularly shaped paving stones and made a meandering path which got narrower as it went to the rear. She immediately felt the difference and as far as I know they lived happily ever after.

What I feel is that when we do our dowsing, for people who do not know anything about the practice, they can be very much helped by practical visible changes as seen through feng shui.

Oh, and please ask your friendly Chinese person how to pronounce feng shui correctly (-hint, a clue – it is not “feng schway”).

If you are interested, I am happy to answer questions as well as offering my Feng Shui Home Study Course in CD-ROM format. Fourteen chapters of this course include full explanations and more than 100 full colour examples of gardens, buildings and parks which represent beneficial and non-beneficial energies.

Know or Don't Know

Last month a worldwide survey was conducted by the United Nations. The only question asked was: “Would you please give your honest opinion about solutions to the food shortage in the rest of the world?”

The survey was a huge failure.

In Africa they didn't know what “food” meant.

In Eastern Europe they didn't know what “honest” meant.

In Western Europe they didn't know what “shortage” meant.

In China they didn't know what “opinion” meant.

In the Middle East they didn't know what “solution” meant.

In South America they didn't know what “please” meant.

In the United States they didn't know what “the rest of the world” meant.

- BioGeometry - Back to a Future for Mankind by Dr Ibrahim Karim

An architect by profession, Dr Ibrahim Karim has conducted intensive research for over thirty five years on the effects of two and three dimensional shapes on biological systems.

This book includes insights into the principles of sacred architecture used in ancient Egypt, plus practical applications of the new vibrational science of bio-geometry to reduce toxic effects from modern technologies and electro-magnetic fields.

There is much to interest the dowser here, as Karim talks about ancient ‘power spots’ and the buildings over them; how we too can utilise this energy, leylines, radiesthesia, devices, and much more. Karim speculates that the ancient Egyptians may well have been capable of feats of anti-gravity, or levitation, through spiritual practices, sounds and shapes, explaining the building of the pyramids.

The author details the evolution of the human brain, our biology, the differences in the brains of males and females, the energies within and outside of our bodies, and why 'electro-smog' is so dangerous to every living thing.

Karim's aim is that all carrier waves eg. TV, radio etc, will also "carry health supportive information into the subtle energy systems of life. We wouldn't have to apply bio-geometry solutions individually to our homes, offices or gardens, because the atmosphere, which is already full of carrier waves, would provide the healthy environmental harmony everywhere." He has achieved this successfully in several Swiss towns.

The author has the most refreshing and optimistic view that we can live responsibly and in harmony with nature, and still have our technology, hopefully moving into a 'Golden Age'.

Karim covers vast topic areas, including water, music, biology, physics, geometry, history and philosophy, to name a few. One could read it in it's entirety or select areas of interest - there is something for everyone in this book.

A Dowsed Dry Well with Water?

By Biggy Hunt

My good friend Mac had a year or so earlier asked me if I dowsed. Though he did not believe in dowsing, he asked would I dowse a well site at a hospital annex he was building. The well driller was very deep in the ground with no water. I dowsed that the location was good and the water abundant and potable. I did not know of the Dowsers Society at that time and had no idea of map dowsing, depths, volumes, etc. but wanted to know. I found the ASD website and joined. Since then I have been to a Convention, read, listened to taped classes, practised, met and talked with talented dowsers.

Mac bought a farm for cattle and asked me to dowse a 5-10 gallons per minute well with good quality water to supply cattle waterers and the house. I dowsed the location and the well driller drilled and drilled, 555 feet and nothing but dust. Mac said the driller would say that water should be here the way the machine drops through different vein locations, but it was bone dry. Mac, being the good friend he is, didn't tell me the hole was dry until a few days later when I asked when the driller was to dig.

An expensive mistake with a friends money did not make me feel well. A 1994 ASD Convention tape of a water dowsing panel showed me my mistake of not asking if it was a vein flowing with water, now, not past or future. Now what?

By chance I had also just received a 1995 ASD tape of ‘Nature: The Changeable & the Unchangeable’ by Gail Montgomery. It tells how to simply make a medicine wheel which can be used to bring in a quality water dome to supply a failing or failed well that another vein could not be moved to supply. I asked “May I, can I, should I follow Gail’s instructions to put a good quality vein of water to feed the dust dry well hole” and upon getting a yes, I proceeded.

First, I asked if it was possible to feed this well with a created water dome. “Yes”. I dowsed the best location to put the medicine wheel and proceeded to put in the medicine wheel and create a water dome. I talked to Gail at this time and was told to draw in two veins coming out different directions from the dome to feed the well.

You may mentally put yourself in the ground at the dome to dig the vein to the well; wet the pencil lead and mentally drag wet water from the dome to the well, or you may have another idea that would work just as well. It may take a few days for the water to get to the well. Dowse the time.

The well kept both cattle waterers filled all summer and while visiting the site with Mac on 12-23-00, I was told the water level in the well is within 33 feet of the surface of the ground.

Dowsing: Simple Connection, Part 2

by Greg Storozuk

Editor's Note: The following is the second part excerpted from last month's American Dowsers Quarterly Digest.

A Dowsing Conversation

When the student is ready, the teacher appears. I was giving a talk once on map dowsing. During a break, one of our elderly members, Ralph Ellis, said to me, "What do you think makes this work, anyway?"

I thought, "Well, I read the Kybalion, I went to college, I know." So I said, "Well, Ralph, I think it's the natural laws and everything else like that". He said, "That's it?" "Well, I'm sure there's a lot to it" I answered and he said, "Hmm..." and just walked away.

Now, this bothered me. I had to talk to this man, so I called him on the telephone. We talked... a lot... and thus began a very long friendship with a man who is probably one of the best•read men I've met in my entire life. You name the philosophy, and this man knew it; he not only knew it, he understood it and could recite from it. He was absolutely incredible. I invited him to visit me and asked if he'd mind if I recorded our conversation. He said that would be fine, and now I have four double•sided cassette tapes from that time. One of the things that we talked about was where dowsing information comes from.

Ralph asked me, "What's your definition of God?" Well, I was born and raised a Catholic, so I gave him everything I had learned from the catechism, and he said, "That's it?"

At this point I started to get a little annoyed, because I thought my mind was deeper, you know. So I said, "Well, let me ask you. What's your definition of God?" He thought for a second and said, "Do you mind if I use the term *deity instead?” He didn’t really care too much for the term God, because it had a lot of religious implications. I said, “No, that’ll work. What’s your definition of deity?” He said, “That which is referred to as deity is the totality of all consciousness, intelligence, and energy, of all that exists whether it’s tangible or intangible”. In amazement, I* thought, “Wow, what Ralph just did was to take the entire universe and put it into three things: consciousness, intelligence, and energy.” I thought about this for a really long time, and I still think about it.

He also referred to unity, the oneness of all things. He loved that term unity. In the very last talk he gave, he said that the first thing dowsers need to look at is space, not the astronomer’s space which has limitations, but the ultimate space. It’s this huge, grand, formless mass of consciousness, intelligence, and energy. If you put a pencil dot on a blank sheet of paper, that dot would represent unity, the oneness of all things. That little dot would represent God. Why? Because it’s the very first identifiable aspect coming from ultimate space. In my opinion, these are all dowsing basics. All this information I shared with you tonight is the foundation upon which the dowsing ability is built. The stronger the foundation, the stronger the dowser’s ability.

Water’s Place in the Scheme of Things

If ASD was one of the old mystery schools, chances are students would be studying these philosophical subjects for two or three years before they even got to touch a dowsing instrument. Then when you were ready, one of the first targets your instructors would give you would be water. Why? A couple of reasons.

- First, our bodies and the planet contain approximately the same percentages of water•roughly 70-75%.

- Second, there are four things necessary for human and animal survival: air, water, food, and shelter. We have to assume that we will always have air, which leaves us three things, and of those, two are directly related. You cannot grow food without water, which makes water a primary requirement for survival.

The reasons, then, should be obvious. We are dowsers. This is the American Society of Dowsers. The public perception of dowsers is that dowsers find water; this is what dowsers do. However, I've noticed over the years that most of the articles in the Digest aren't related to water. Most people don't give a damn about locating water anymore.

This is really important, for your own survival if nothing else. I've heard the argument from people who say they don't need to learn water dowsing, because all they have to do is turn on the tap, and there it is. Yes, this is true, but think about this. We're living in an era of terrorism. Suppose somebody decides to take out the grid. Then what? How do you think your water gets to you? It comes from pumps. Where does the electricity for the pumps come from? The grid. Where's your water? You wouldn't have any.

A Challenge for Dowsers

I'm not asking everyone to go out and drill a water well. Instead I challenge every single one of you to go out in your backyard and see if you can locate a fresh flowing vein of underground drinking water less than a foot deep. Can it be done? Hell, yes, it can be done. Less than a foot deep. That's not asking too much, plus you'll be able to prove to yourself that you can do it.

AND, God forbid, if the grid goes out, you'll survive. If anybody on this planet survives, it should be dowsers!

If you can't find a vein less than a foot deep in your backyard, go to a park or somewhere else. Find a vein of underground water less than a foot deep. Don't say they don't exist, because I know they do. I did this myself when I was out camping once. I dug with my hand and a rock. Finally I got down about eight inches, and the side of the hole was a little damp. The water was just barely trickling into the hole, but it was water. It took me about an hour to fill my canteen. I didn't have to do it, because I had water in my vehicle; but I had to try, to prove to myself that I can survive.

One of my very first teachers in Danville, Peter Harmon, has been dowsing many, many years, and he digs wells by hand. Once while he was digging, his three-year-old daughter, Melanie was nearby, digging with a spoon in the ground and playing with the water from the hole. Taking a break at one point, he asked her, "Where'd you find the water?" She said, "In the hole". She was doing the same thing Peter was doing, except she was using a little spoon. Three inches deep! And she had this little hole filled with water. If a three-year-old can do this then you adults should be able to do it, too.

I am seriously concerned about the survival of the Society if there are not more water dowsers being produced. I seriously am. Little by little, everything is becoming diluted. The Society is not an old mystery school, and the intangible, philosophical foundation of the dowsing basics are subject to that dilution. We all know that dowsing has a zillion applications. As far as your mind can think, that's how far you can dowse. This is being shown. It's in the Digest every month and here at the Conventions. Dowsing or all kinds of things. But how many seminars are there on water? How many people are going to attend those seminars on water? That's far more important. Let me ask you this: can you drink a ley-line? Or an auric field? Let's get the priorities straight! Business before pleasure.

I am not putting any of these other dowsing applications down; don't get me wrong. I do much more than dowse wells myself. But what I am trying to do is support dowsing priorities. Water dowsing is a basic skill. Like I said, I challenge all of you to do that. Go out in your backyard and see if you can find some very shallow underground flowing water. Chances are you'll forget about this when you go home. I'm asking you not to. Please give it some very serious thought for your own survival.

Longevity and Weight Loss Resistance

by Dr. Indrani Maity

Are you one of the many who have tried everything and just cannot lose weight, especially around the middle? How frustrating and dangerous! Being overweight actually increases our risk for disease. So, why can't we lose weight?

The Top Eight Reasons People Cannot Lose Weight

- Cravings due to low neurotransmitters and brain chemicals (serotonin and/or dopamine).
- Hormonal imbalance.
- Thyroid disorder.
- Insulin resistance.
- High cortisol levels due to chronic stress.
- History of failure with weight loss.
- Allergies.
- Gut dysbiosis. (This refers to use of medications and toxic chemicals that cause weight gain or difficulty in losing weight, as well as chronic sleep deprivation).

Here is the secret: if your organs and body systems are working properly, weight loss will be a natural by-product.

It is impossible to target just one area of weight loss, such as flattening your tummy, without looking at the whole picture of what is causing that weight in the first place. A holistic approach will bring long-lasting weight loss and overall improved health.

How Can Dowsing Help?

I have come to these conclusions based on my personal and professional experience and education. I personally have experienced several health issues, including weight loss resistance, and have overcome them. I also use dowsing extensively in my practice to confirm my analyses, as well as to confirm the specifics of a resolution. Dowsing can be used to determine the cause of your specific and genetic challenges, as well as determining what your solutions may be. Dowsing the “reasons” that are listed above to at least get an idea of your current state of health and longevity.

What Can Be Done?

Addressing the following will also enhance your longevity and improve your resiliency while disease proofing yourself. The four most important steps are:

- Eat whole foods.
- Cross-training exercise.
- Nutrient support.
- Healthy behaviours.

Toxins are clogging the pathways in our bodies, blocking us on physical, emotional, psychological and spiritual levels. How many people have zero energy and then drag themselves to the gym and torture their bodies on the treadmill? If we're tired, our bodies are trying to get our attention. We need rest! Restorative yoga or deep breathing exercises are some alternatives that are calming and energizing, as opposed to that grande latte that will pick you up, then drop you down and further aggravate the problem.

Lifestyle changes are hard. Baby steps are the way to do it! Be compassionate. Meet yourself where you are. We have to heal our bodies before we will see results. In doing so, we will lower our risk of disease, increase our energy, be able to think more clearly, and cope better emotionally. Our bodies are trying to get our attention. Let's start listening to them, so that we can enjoy life and pursue our higher purposes.

The French Coil

by Roland L. Moore

The coil originated in France in the 1930's. Its use was expanded in this country by Marcel Triau. Many of us remember Marcel showing us how to install it on the Danville Green several years back.

The equipment needed is a long piece of copper wire (#10 gauge for small trees; #8 for larger trees; and wooden sticks for support.) You can use either covered or uncovered wire. To install this you must be able to dowse.

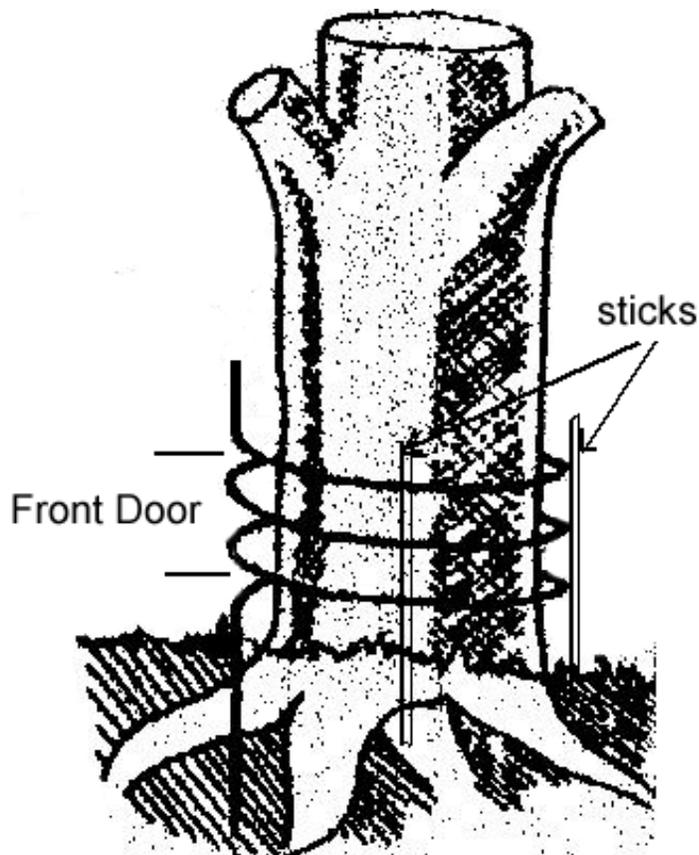

A tree has a front and back door. You need to locate the front door by dowsing *. When you have located it, push the wire (bare) as far as you can into the ground in front of the front door about 3 to 5 inches away from the tree. If you wish you can use a ground rod and connect the wire to it. The coil must start below the bottom of the front door. Next, locate the top of the front door, as that is where your coil will end. Now you must dowse the number of coils needed and the vertical distance between each loop.

These coils must run clockwise from the ground up. When you stop at the top of the front door, bend the wire up and cut it off, leaving about 6 inches to go straight up. This wire coil should run 3 to 5 inches away from the surface of the bark. The first coil should be below the level of the front door.

Any doubts: dowse it.

At one of our Chapter meetings we installed a coil on an apple tree. We used covered wire, and holes were drilled in the stakes to make installation easy. We planted the stakes in the ground and ran the wires through the holes of the stakes, around the tree. The apples improved over the previous year, but the deer consumed most of them.

A friend of mine was going to cut down two of his pear trees that looked half dead. I installed the French coils on both of these trees.

In a year's time they both showed a lot of improvement by bearing some fruit.

I also worked on a cluster of white birch trees with the idea of getting rid of the leaf minor infection. Time will tell.

I hope I have sparked some interest in some of you readers so you will try this and tell us what happened by writing an article for the Newsletter. This is a learning experience for everyone.

**Locating the Front Door:*

Using your rods, walk around the tree, focussing on finding the Tree's Front Door, until you get a response. When you get a response, move your rods up and down to find the door's height.

Quote of the day

“The happiness of life is made up of minute fractions—the little soon-forgotten charities of a kiss, a smile, a kind look, a heartfelt compliment in the disguise of a playful raillery, and the countless other infinitessimals of pleasurable thought and genial feeling.”

Dowsing for Geopathic Stress & Water

Trevor will update his previous talks on Geopathic Stress and will focus on the need to learn how to be aware of the physical signs that something is wrong in an area.

Another key point is that even if the harmful energies have been treated, they can come back at any time. It is essential to learn to dowse for Geopathic Stress energies and to check when your gut feeling tells you that there is something wrong.

The most common places Trevor has found GS in homes is across the master bed and the office chair! The most common signs are light bulbs blowing in the same place, the urge to regularly urinate when in specific places whilst not when in other places, a feeling of heaviness and sadness in specific places, and the inability to get work done in a certain spot e.g. the office!

There is nearly always harmful energy in the hall and we will indentify these areas so people can 'feel' and dowse these places, both positive and harmful.

The most important thing is the old saying:

"To give a man a fish feeds him for a day. To teach a man 'how' to fish feeds him for a lifetime."
