Ian White

- Australian Bush Flower Essences -

Ian White is the founder of the Australian Bush Flower Essences and a 5th generation Australian herbalist who has been practising successfully as a Naturopath since 1979.

His great-great-grandmother worked as a herbalist during Australia's 1850's Gold Rush. Both Ian's great-grandmother and grandmother were among the first white people to research and use Australian native plants for healing.

Ian as a young boy grew up in the bush, living next door to his grandmother and would spend as much time as possible helping her make her herbal tinctures and extracts. She would often take him for walks in the bush teaching him the healing qualities of many of the flora within the Australian landscape.

Ian has continued this family tradition, though specialising in the emotional and spiritual qualities of the Australian bush. He is the author of five major books and teaches his Bush Essences workshops in over 30 countries.

From the Editor

We are living through extraordinary times. All around the world people are stressed. If it is not from health threats from mutant viruses, exploding volcanoes, rising sea water levels or uprisings, then it is, like here in Australia, from the menace of wild fires.

These things have always happened in one form or another. So what have people done in the past, and what tools do we need to survive through these upheavals? I can see the following tools as essential: gratitude, inner strength, discrimination, a firm footing in reality and access to real news. You may wonder why I mentioned gratitude first. Gratitude means you recognise what you have, not what you do not have. This is essential to build your inner strength, so you will not fall prey to panic.

How do you build inner strength? Simply, what you practise you get good at. Practice inner silence, focus, sharpen your dowsing skills, so you can find out what news is true or fake. Every month Helen, our library coordinator, reviews new dowsing books, read them. We have a large collection of books and DVDs, borrow them, they are good resources. From time to time we have seminars, make sure to attend, they are great value.

A good avenue of inner learning is to meditate. It does not matter if you use a candle or a mantra, you will eventually be faced with having to curb your thoughts, to focus. This is a great exercise, it will help your dowsing skills as well as your intuition.

Last minute news, We will have a morning seminar with Robert Gourlay on the morning of the March meeting, Sunday March 15th, from 10:00 to 12:00.

It will be free for members, $60 for non-members, but both need to register. More info and a registration form are available on our website: www.dowsingaustralia.com. Do not miss out on this one.

Until next time,

It Was Not Just Sheer Luck, Part 2

Lieut. F. A. Loubser (South African Police, Retired)
British Society of Dowsers, December 1979

One day a Mrs. Hoppe of Swakopmund, South West Africa, phoned me to say that her husband Bruno, whom I know very well, was ill in bed and the doctor reckoned that only a miracle would get him on to his feet again. I told her that it could not be that bad. The doctor would find that a few vertebrae were displaced in his spinal column but nothing else. I asked her for a plan of the house, even if it was hand drawn, showing every room and indicating the position of the bed in his bedroom.

After a few days she sent me the plan. Swakopmund is about 250 miles from Gobabis, so it would not have been a joy ride for me to go and check it myself. I was anxious to get him on his feet again, because he was a private contractor to the South West Africa Administration delivering sand and stone to the Roads Department on a road building project near Grootfontein.

He had to supervise his lorries because the drivers were not trustworthy and the lorries would be off the road in no time if he were not there. Being a good mechanic, he could repair them quickly if they broke down. He was living on a small holding about 2 miles outside Swakopmund and became ill when he was visiting his family over the weekend.

I discovered that an underground stream was passing under his bed and the rays emanating from it were affecting his health. After I had mapped the plan I started off with the question and answer system. I found that the following vertebrae were out of alignment and should be fixed immediately by a chiropractor: Nrs. 1C, 1D and 5L. According to the pendulum this was not all that was wrong with him. The pendulum indicated he had trouble with a few teeth as well.

I started off with the lower jaw, working from the centre in front, first to the left and then to the right. I did the same with the upper jaw. On the lower jaw I found an inflamed tooth on the left hand side, the fourth one from the centre, and on the upper jaw an inflamed tooth on the right hand side, the fifth one from the centre. Otherwise I could find nothing the matter with him.

I phoned Mrs. Hoppe and asked her to move her husband into Room 3, to be well away from the underground stream. I advised her to get a dentist out immediately and have the bad teeth extracted.

There was a chiropractor in business in Swakopmund, and she should get him out to fix the spinal column. She told me her husband was very frightened of the dentist and he would rather endure the pain of an inflamed tooth than have it extracted. However, she took matters into her own hands and moved Mr. Hoppe to Room 3, phoned for the dentist to check his teeth at home and also for the chiropractor to check his spinal column.

As this was the first time I had ever checked and given advice on health matters I was anxious to know what the outcome would be. After three days I phoned the Hoppe family and was glad to learn that I was correct about the two bad teeth and the three vertebrae which were out of alignment. The dentist said the two bad teeth had already poisoned his system to a great extent. In a fortnight Mr. Hoppe was back on the job again. When I had word from him recently he was healthy and in good spirits.

About a month after Mr. Hoppe returned to work his wife phoned me to say that a bunch of keys had been lost. It consisted of the keys of the house, her husband's garages and oil stores and the post box key, as well as the outer door keys of the laundry house where Mrs. Hoppe was working. When work was finished she had given the keys to her son in front of the laundry house, so that he could clear the post box. He was on a bicycle and she motored back home after she had been to the shops.

On her arrival her son told her that he had lost the keys after he had been to the post office and before he left Swakopmund for home. She went back with him but could find nothing. She phoned me from a friend's home and asked if I could help.

I had no alternative but to work it out on the 'question and answer' system. I found that the keys had been dropped by the boy in the main street, picked up by somebody and handed in at the local police station. I phoned and told her to go to the police station and enquire about them. She did so and the keys were handed over to her. Somebody had handed them in at the police station half an hour before.

During January 1976, I reported on transfer at Bloemhof, Transvaal. Chief Traffic Inspector T. Lambrechts owned a farm nearby. He farmed with small stock. During September of that year he bought 21 sheep from another farmer in a different district and brought the sheep to his farm. These sheep would not mix with his other sheep and always kept apart. A north-westerly wind was blowing strongly and after the wind calmed down he checked his animals and found that the 21 sheep were missing.

He could find no trace of them on the farm, nor could he find any traces of them taken through the boundary fence. The wind was blowing so strongly that all tracks were wiped out.

He brought me a map of the dis-strict and requested my help. I took the map home and did some map dowsing that day. I got a reaction at a spot 8 farms away from his farm. I followed the route the sheep had taken, from the spot I found they went through the fence, and went slowly on the map following their route. At a spot on the 8th farm the pendulum oscillated violently. I had checked the map from different directions but arrived at the same spot every time.

After that I started with the question and answer system and found that only 20 sheep were still alive. One had been slaughtered on a neighbouring farm and the meat was at that moment cooking in a pot. I again checked the route, which led along roads and through badly kept boundary fences up to the same spot where I got the violent reaction from the pendulum.

I phoned Mr. Lambrechts and he came along, fetched the map and went straight to the farm I had indicated. He found the sheep at the spot I had marked on the map, and one of his farm hands drove them back to his farm.

One evening during October 1976, the old people's home at Bloemhof was in confusion because one of its residents, Mr. F. J. Fourie, was missing and nobody knew what had happened to him. He had no relatives in Bloemhof or district, and we were afraid that he had taken a car either to the north or south, because Bloemhof is on the main route from Johannesburg to Cape Town. It would be an impossible task to trace him in either direction, because he could be anywhere. Enquiries at petrol stations in Bloemhof brought nothing to light and Sergeant Steyn, who had been detailed to investigate the disappearance, was instructed to make further enquiries at the old people's home. An 80 year old woman handed him a wallet which Mr. Fourie had given her as a keepsake before leaving the previous day. No further information came to hand on the second day.

On the third day, I offered to help Sergeant Steyn by map dowsing. The Vaal River flows quite close to Bloemhof, and on the western bank I got a reaction but fainter than for a living person. I realised that the question and answer system would be best, and I arrived at the following answers, which I must admit I found confusing. That Mr. Fourie was dead and the cause of death was suffocation and 75% burns. That he would be found on the bank of the Vaal River, about 450 yards from the bridge across the river. That this spot was east south-east of the bridge. That he was not lying down nor was he sitting upright but was in a leaning position against a tree.

I gave Sergeant Steyn the particulars and they searched for him on the river bank on the western side of the river. The body was found in a leaning position against a tree trunk. It was badly burnt and an empty one gallon petrol can was found next to the body. I asked the District Surgeon, who was on the scene, how Mr. Fourie could have been suffocated, as it was as clear as daylight that he was badly burnt. The doctor replied that the fumes of petrol when it was ignited suffocated him, as the signs of suffocation were there and the multiple burns also contributed to his death.

One day during November, 1976, a reporter from a Sunday newspaper arrived at the station and questioned me about the tracing of Chief Traffic Inspector Lambrecht's missing sheep. At first I would not give any particulars of my method of recovering the missing sheep nor of any of the other successes I had had in the past, but finally I decided to give him particulars of a few of my successes where police work was involved. A fortnight after the article was published a letter arrived at my District Commandant's office through the usual channels from the Commissioner of the South African Police, asking me for a report to explain my successes and why I had allowed the article to be published without permission from Headquarters.

After the article was published I was inundated with telephone calls, and letters asking for help and assistance arrived at the rate of 20 to 30 a day. I was tested to the utmost in answering all the letters and the pendulum and I worked overtime. The final round with the Commissioner came towards the end of 1977, when he forbade me to help people in this way. The following case contributed to it.

On 1st April, 1977, I reported at Stilfontein police station on transfer from Bloemhof. During May of that year I had a long distance call from Uitenhage in the Cape Province from a man who claimed that he was the father of a young man who had drowned in very suspicious circumstances. As a long distance telephone call was very expensive I requested him to write me a letter giving me some details and to send me a rough sketch of the area where his son had drowned.

The letter arrived with a rough sketch and also gave the following information. The father stated that his 19 year old son had been a musician, and one night towards the end of April had had to play in a band for a dance at a nearby village. He had travelled with a man who was going through that village. Just after the dance session began it started to rain and it poured until the session ended. His son met an ex-girl friend, who was escorted by a man notorious for his jealousy. The girl asked her escort to give the musician a lift, as he was staying on their travel route. He agreed and they set off in his small car. The rain was still coming down heavily when they arrived at a rivulet which had turned into a monster of cascading waters, bringing down trees and rocks.

They stopped and the musician got out of the car to check the strength of the stream over the low water bridge over the rivulet. He was washed off the bridge and it was the last they saw of him, and the father suspected foul play and reckoned he had been pushed into the stream.

I checked the rough sketch but could get no reaction to the missing man on it. I switched over to the question and answer system and found that he had not been pushed into the water by the other man, that he had, in fact, fallen into the stream and been washed away towards a dam.

The father phoned me a few days after I had received his letter and rough sketch and I told him that I could find no trace of his son on the rough sketch, but my finding was that he was drowned and his body was in a dam lower down the rivulet. He informed me that the water of the rivulet flowed into the Loerie Dam 4 miles below the low water bridge. I asked him to send me another sketch covering the area from the far end of the first sketch up to and including the Loerie Dam.

The rough sketch soon arrived and I did some map dowsing on it and got a reaction at a certain spot in the dam. I checked the map from different angles, and every time I came to that spot I got a reaction. I marked the spot on the sketch and returned it to the father, setting out my findings. I asked him to take the letter and the rough sketch to his local police station, as it would help them to solve the mystery of the drowning and to recover the body.

The reaction of the local police was just the opposite to what I had expected. They in turn handed the letter and sketch to their District Commandant, who was very sarcastic over my way of tracing drowned persons. He forwarded my letter and the rough sketch and his remarks thereon to his Divisional Commissioner. He was even more sarcastic in his covering letter to the Commissioner and referred to me as the 'so-called Lieutenant.'

The report caused a chain reaction and two months later a letter arrived through my Divisional Commissioner to my District Commandant asking for an explanation. I was 'carpeted' as if I had done something wrong. I was warned that according to Judges' Rules I could refrain from making a statement, but I decided to make a full statement, setting out all the details.

In my statement I stated that I was satisfied that the body of the musician was in the dam at that spot, and as soon as the water had dried up sufficiently they would recover the body. My report together with the District Commandant's views on the matter (which were very favourable) were forwarded to the Commissioner.

Ten days after the report was forwarded the father of the musician phoned me to say that his son's body had been recovered at the exact spot in the dam indicated by me on the rough sketch. My District Commandant notified the Commissioner immediately, but in spite of that the Divisional Commissioner personally came to my office and handed me a letter from the Commissioner forbidding me to help other people in this way.

I informed him there and then that one could not hide one's talents and I would rather go on early pension when I reached the age of 55 years on 3rd May, 1978 than accede to the Commissioner's request. I immediately gave notice of my retirement at the end of May, 1978.

Looking back over the few years since a bright star in the person of Mr. James B. Steele arrived on my horizon, I have solved hundreds of cases with the pendulum and rod, some of which were very complicated indeed. I have had my few failures too, but looking back the past seven years have been full to the brim. With all the successes I had in very complicated cases I earned myself the nickname of 'Seer.'

Another bright star with the pendulum in the medical field with whom I got acquainted through correspondence is Mr. H. S. J. Adlam of Knysna, Cape Province. (a BSD member) I salute him for his brilliant and fantastic way of diagnosing illness and bringing relief to the sick and those in pain.

I know it is out of place for me to give advice to veterans with more than 30 to 50 years experience to their credit, but here are a few tips I would like to pass on to beginners and those who cannot make any progress. When a question is put to the pendulum make sure that it is a straight one to which the answer should be either Yes or No. If you ask a stupid question you must expect a similar answer.

I have found it safest to write the question down with a question mark at the end and then the words Yes or No. When the question is written down concentrate on it, and before you put the pencil on either word Yes or No make your mind a complete blank and concentrate on nothing; the pendulum will do the rest. It works 100% with me and I believe it will work with you, too.

Doing this gives your subconscious mind a chance to do the work. Your conscious mind, which is assisted by the five senses, will doom you to failure every time you make use of it. Imagination is one of the dowser's worst enemies. Never allow yourself to be influenced by anybody in getting an answer to a problem you are about to solve. If you start imagining things the pendulum or rod will answer your questions just as you have imagined, but when you arrive at the spot to check up you will find nothing at all. I have walked into that trap many a time.

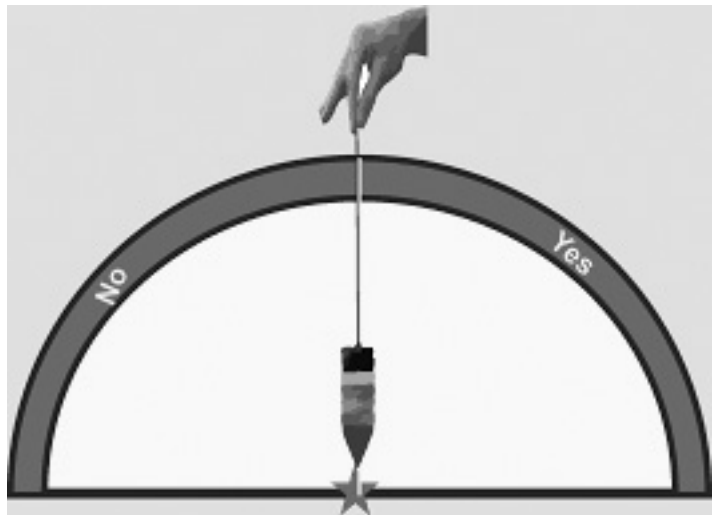

I do not believe in demonstrations, because one is not at ease in the presence of other people, especially when one is being put to the test. I like to work on my own to achieve results and so prove my point to the 'Doubting Thomases'.

To me distance is no problem. With a map of any part of Great Britain, the U.S.A. or any other part of the globe, together with a bit of background, I can solve the problem here in South Africa. You must have confidence in yourself, otherwise you will achieve nothing. Do not lie down because of failures, but find out the causes of failure and avoid them at your next attempt.

Here in South Africa we are only a handful of dowzers, who know a fraction of the subject. The authorities look upon us as though we are practising something bordering on witchcraft. Among them I include my Commissioner, who decided to go on pension the same day as I did. I feel no grudge against my seniors who tried to run me down but can only exclaim: “Lord, forgive them for what they are doing.”

You get those who are keen and interested but they are afraid of what the Smiths and the Joneses would say about it. It is no good trying to win the older generation over to our side.

If it comes to the pinch they will read a quick sermon over you better than a priest or a parson can do it and at the same time condemn you.

How many people are walking around today well gifted in dowsing and do not know how to use their talents? I do think we must get the young interested in this art, as well as the press, whom we regard as Enemy No. 1. I was always critical of the press and was under the impression that reporters would bedevil the whole issue, but I now think the press must be used to promote the cause, because it is the quickest way of reaching the general public.

This art will live on because it was there from the early days of the Bible, and the good Lord will prevent it from becoming extinct.

The Year 2020

By Lyn Wood, President of the Dowsing Society of Victoria.

Reprinted from the DSV, February 2020

under the title 'President's Report'

Right now, in Australia it's hard to feel as though it can really be a Happy New Year! So many of us are working together to change the current weather conditions and resolve the bush fire crisis in Australia. Yet, I continue to trust that you can create a wonderful year for yourself in 2020. Hopefully it will become a year of balance.

I've been reading an Astrology report (www.starchildglobal.com) that talks about many shifts occurring that will break down old structures, making way for new structures. Whilst many say life is not as good as in the 'old days', maybe this is a time for current ways – which are not of benefit to mankind – to collapse and be replaced with some of the good things represented from the past – like love, compassion, appreciation, respect and care for others and our environment.

I feel we need to be quite discerning about media reports and remain as calm and peaceful as possible amidst the present worldwide chaos. I read that: 'The Full Moon and Lunar Eclipse on 10 January initiates the powerful conjunction of the Sun, Mercury, Pluto and Saturn on 12 January, and as the planets align, they bring in the beautiful energy of the Divine Feminine – creative essence to support the changes. Saturn creates form and structure through time and Pluto transforms through breaking down form and structure. In conjunction with Mercury and the Sun, this indicates powerful changes in how we think and how we express ourselves in the world.'

This must be good! It's possible that some people will feel upset with structures breaking down and some of us will need to support them towards creating a better future.

Coincidentally, I also received an email talking of an energy activation that is due to occur on Earth at the time of the Saturn/Pluto conjunction in January 2020. The planetary Solar Plexus Chakra located at Uluru will apparently be fully activated. Aboriginal lore tells of a ritual back in the Dreamtime that was interrupted and never completed.

This ritual was meant to fulfil the great plan of the Earth Spirit. Once the ritual is consummated, 'perfection will spread throughout the world'. In other words, this ritual will open the way from 4th to 5th world consciousness. This event is symbolised by a great pole, or cosmic umbilical cord, which unites Earth with the Sun. It is predicted that this chord will begin to function in 2020 AD, at the time of the Saturn/Pluto conjunction.

Together, Uluru and Kata Tjuta form the world Solar Plexus Chakra. This is the primary chakra for the maintenance of global health, vitality of the planet, and all living things. If things are not right in these aspects, then the whole world system suffers. It is now time for this to be healed. The healing began in October, 2019, when a total ban on climbing the highly sacred site of Uluru was declared.

According to Robert Coon, author of 'The Rainbow Serpent and the Holy Grail', this powerful activation will also involve a blast of divine light and energy through the song lines (ley lines) of the planet, connecting all of Earth's main chakras together, and most especially one of the main energy arteries/song lines referred to by the Aboriginal people as The Rainbow Serpent representing Divine Feminine Energy to many.

This line starts at Uluru (solar plexus) and travels through Bali (world purification centre), to Glastonbury (heart and third eye chakras), to Lake Titicaca (sacral chakra) and then back around and through to Uluru in Australia's Northern Territory.

The planetary events in January 2020 are actually a rare quadruple conjunction involving Saturn, Pluto, Mercury and the Sun. The previously interrupted ceremony will culminate in the reactivation of the Solar Umbilical Cord of Planet Earth with the Sun, and on deeper levels with the Great Central Sun. This, in turn, will assist in the creation of an archetypical communication between the Sun and Earth, to help us to more fully embrace a 'Golden Age'. Something to really look forward to.

Dowsing Protocol for Bushfires & Drought

By Heather Wilks

Feel free to make your own adjustments according to prompts you receive. Start by spinning your pendulum in the NO direction to take out what is not wanted, then let the pendulum take over.

Scrambling the frequency of the bushfires and drought conditions in Victoria, South Australia, NSW, Queensland, Western Australia, Tasmania and the Territories. Adjusting the frequencies of whatever is blocking rain from falling naturally and removing all threats to power supplies. Releasing all non-beneficial thought forms, negative political influences, agendas, entities, the spirit of greed, media-fed hysteria and everything else contributing to fear levels and catastrophic outcomes for the people, animals and land in the affected regions. Scrambling the effects of Mass Consciousness on the situations affecting the drought and bushfire conditions in many areas of Australia. And, neutralising all the negative effects of humans on the weather and the Nature Spirits generally.

(Wait until your pendulum stops spinning.)

Start to spin pendulum in your YES direction to bring about what is wanted and then let it take over.

Transforming the energy to the most beneficial to extinguish the bush-fires quickly and easily - and to bring about increased balance, harmony and peace for calmer, more beneficial weather conditions with safe, lower temperatures for the people, animals and properties throughout Victoria, South Australia, NSW, Queensland, Western Australia, Tasmania and the Territories. Bringing in natural rainfall in beneficial amounts in all the areas it is needed and adjusting wind levels for increased safety. Inviting in the Spirits of love and gratitude, peace, calm and respect to work with the Earth, Mother Nature, the Nature Spirits and the Spirit of Rain, Spirit of Wind and the Spirit of Fire for the highest good of Australia.

Magnifying this dowsing with the help of spiritual dowzers and the skills of the best dowzers on the planet. This or something better as safe and appropriate from now and into the future across all time, dimensions space and reality, as safe and appropriate. Thank you.

(Wait until your pendulum stops spinning.)

When relief is evident, as winds subside, fires are extinguished and rain begins to fall, start your pendulum in the Yes direction and bring in the Spirits of love, gratitude, respect and freedom to thank the Nature Spirits, and the Spirits of rain, wind and fire.

With special thanks to American dowser Raymon Grace for his inspiration in this work.

Have We Been Here Before?

By Janet Devey

British Society of Dowsers - July 2018

I purchased a pendulum to take along to an introductory dowsing course at the local college. Of course I couldn't wait two weeks until the course began so had to have a go. But what could I do? Surely one of my many alternative books would have a section on dowsing. So I potted through all of them without success until I came to a tiny book, one of the 'How to . . . series' on 'How to Uncover your Past Lives' by Ted Andrews. This focussed mainly on meditation with different coloured candles but at the end there was a dowsing section which also told me how to get going.

I was away, clearly getting a yes and no response and was all set to find out about some past lives. If we have been here before, we have had many lives so asking for some information on one isn't very helpful. The book advised that you ask for information about a life that is influencing your current life in a good or bad way now.

Questions include:

- In what century was the life? This can be narrowed down to your date of birth and death.
- Was I male or female?
- What country did I live in?
- What was my job?
- How did I die?
- Was I rich? Was I poor?

Did I know the person who is my current husband / wife/ child etc. in the life, and what was the relationship?

The questions tend to come to you as you gain information. I picked up information on three lives, one in England, one in Iceland.

I couldn't find the country for the third so I picked up a large map of the world looking for where it may have been but before I got very far, the pendulum started rotating as it dangled over the map and I realised it had found the country for me.

Thailand. Strangely Thailand and Iceland were the first two countries I visited when I started travelling about 20 years earlier.

The information I gained was very helpful in understanding a few issues I had with my current life but how do we know that the information gained is really from a past life? Of course we don't know but two things gave it some credibility in my view.

One life was based in Suffolk around the turn of the 15th century. I have a friend in this life who was a friend in that life and also now lives in Suffolk. She was curious so we map dowsed to see where we would have lived as children. We identified a village and went along. There were many old cottages clustered around the church and the rods pointed to one of them.

We had to get in the car to find my 'home'. I held one rod in my hand and we drove down a straight road, the rod pointing straight ahead. Just before a T-junction, the rod turned rapidly to the left, pointing to a house standing back from the road on its own.

at this house. It was called the Old Vicarage. I believe I was the vicar's daughter and life probably revolved around the church.

My friend had married and moved to the coast close to an important church that was extended at that time. We had a good day exploring and we were definitely picking up lots of information but what took me by surprise was the surges of energy that shot through me when I was close to these churches and in particular the Old Vicarage.

I had completed my dowsing course when I went to Suffolk, and I then went on a follow up course where at some stage we dowsed through our current lifetime looking for emotional blocks which needed clearing and replacing with positive emotions. We worked with a partner whom we hadn't met before. We went back 5 years at a time until we came to our time in the womb, conception and then through our past lives (a century at a time).

My partner picked up some lives I was not aware of, but she also discovered a life at the turn of the 17th century where she found that I was a man who died of a disease between the ages of 45 and 50. I had kept a record of my research. There can only be one life at the turn of the century. This was the life in Thailand where I found that I was a man who died of a disease aged 47. So we had both come up with the same details.

Where this information came from I am not sure but the information gained has been helpful for me.

Your Membership Renewal is now due.

We have started the year 2020 at a time when serious challenges to our environment, ourselves and our own survival as a species await us. How do you hold onto your own peace, how to reflect it so it also affects your environment and how do you evolve as a person?

Dowsing offers some personal solutions, and the Dowsers Society of NSW Inc. endeavours to provide training, and relevant information, via monthly presentations and newsletter articles.

You can stay tuned to Dowsing, participate in learning, as well as support the Society, by renewing your membership, either in person at the meeting, or by mail.

You can tear off and send the Membership Renewal Form, located on the other side of this page, with a cheque or money order made out to Dowsers Society of NSW Inc. You can now pay by Eftpos directly at the meeting if you wish. You can also pay by bank deposit. In this case just make sure to mention your name on the deposit, so we know who has renewed.

Details of our account are as follows: (Please do not send cash)

Account name:	Dowsers Society of NSW Inc

Library News

Library News:

We have three new books by our wonderful conference speaker Grahame Gardner, from Scotland. One of the most respected dowsers in the UK and internationally, Grahame is a professional dowser and geomancer specialising in geopathic and technopathic remedial work, and consulting on the creation of sacred spaces such as stone circles and labyrinths.

Dowsing Magic: Everything you need to know to get started in dowsing. An ideal introduction to this ancient skill.

Dowsing with Sigils: For dowsers, reinforcing intention with a sigil can help you to achieve long-lasting effects. With little more than your pendulum and focused intent, sigils can be easily programmed and activated for almost any situation. This book explains what sigils are and takes you through the process of creating and energising your own sigils.

A Basic Guide to Technopathic Stress: Growing numbers of people are suffering from electro-hypersensitivity. This book is an essential 'risk assessment' for home and office, and outlines some simple precautions that will allow you to maintain a technological lifestyle without getting sick. This revised and updated third edition has new information on driverless cars, solar panels, 5G networks, the 'smart grid', and much more.

Marguerite Wetton

- Kinesiology Balance -

Kinesiology is a method to enhance health, first developed by Dr George Goodheart, who connected the Chinese Acupuncture lines with chiropractic.

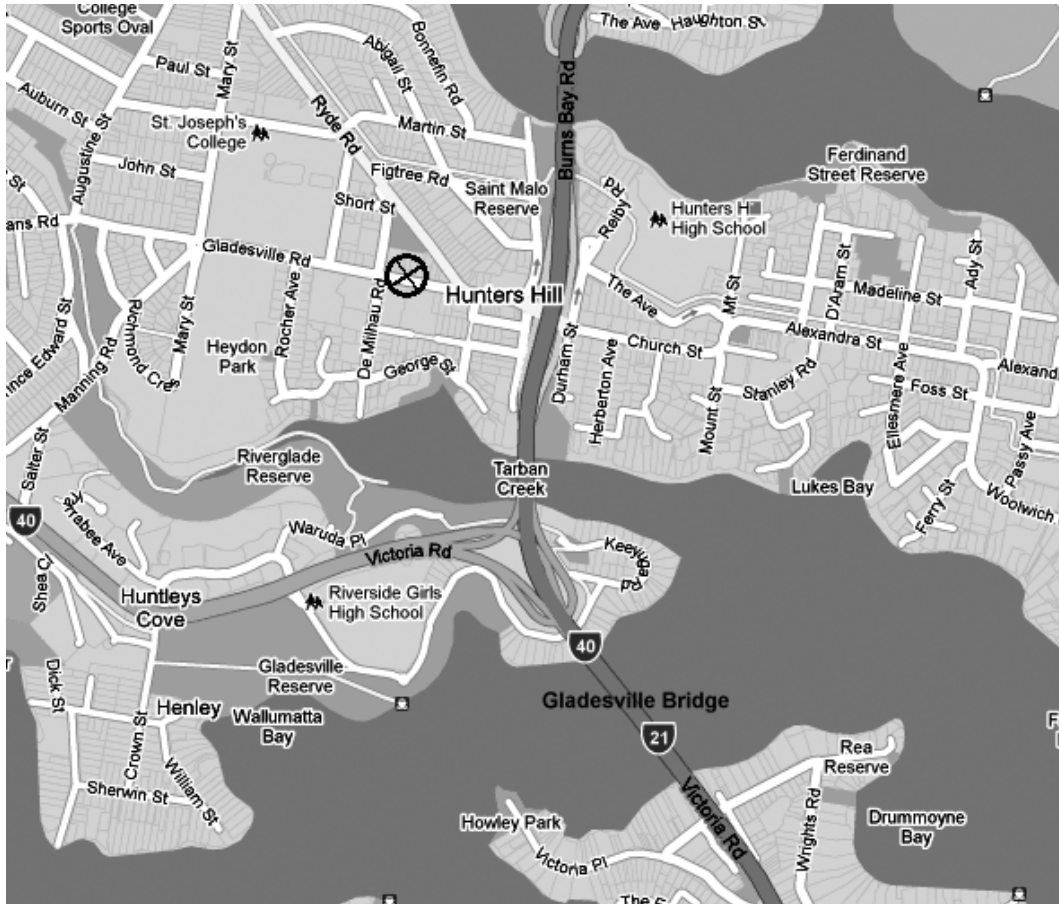

Since then, it has grown into a modality utilizing the emotional reference of acupuncture points, used rather as pressure than with needles, affording subtle shifts in the body-mind system.

Marguerite uses a kinesiology modality, which organizes and balances the organs. The purpose of a balance is to take personal responsibility to support and partner the body through its diverse experiences, and works well no matter what else is being used (including allopathic medications).

It stimulates self-observation, to release negative mind states affecting organs and meridians and enables a shift to more positive ones. The touch and movement within a balance gives the brain a felt sense of change having occurred.

Marguerite is a somatic counsellor using homeopathy, kinesiology and yoga. She practises in Sydney, Switzerland and South Africa. The work is taught in South Sudan, Africa, Europe, USA and Australia.
