- Restructuring Water to Hold a Permanent Negative Charge -

Robert is an environmental scientist, researcher, inventor and dowser. He has been commercially involved in research and development of biological and water conditioning technologies since 1992, including the development of mapping technologies for groundwater exploration. Robert has been operating as a groundwater dowser since 1997.

In his presentation he will outline his invention of devices to restructure water to hold a permanent negative charge. All natural, pristine flowing water holds a negative charge and it is only when water is not flowing, or flowing through pipes, that the negative charge changes to a positive charge. Healthy human cells are designed to renew at -50mV, and when the cell charge falls to a positive charge, sickness and disease will occur. The consumption of negatively charged water is one strategy to sustain a high negative charge at a cellular level. His presentation will cover:

- The science of structured water
- Cellular charge and the link to disease
- Device design and various applications for negatively charged water
- Examples of the effects of negatively charged water in food production
- Ways to sustain cellular charge

From the Editor

Life passes quickly and the people around us who we take for granted slowly pass on. Many of my dowsing friends and mentors have passed away, Michael Poynder, Hamish Miller, Slim Spurling, Peter Ruehmkorff and many others.

My dad recently joined their ranks at 95. Rather than being sad, I feel like a time for celebration for lives well lived, for personal growth, for their effect on the people around them and the learning they were able to share with others.

It took me many years to get to it, but fortunately I was able to tell my dad how much I loved him before he passed on. I think it is so important that we do not take our loved ones for granted. When I was a kid you would never express these things. Not that they were not true, but people felt more shy to expose how they really felt.

Times were hard after the war and mostly people repressed their feelings. It is a relief to be able to say in a very heartfelt way to your Mum “I love you Mum” even if it is not Mothers Day. You will be surprised how much love you will feel on seeing her smile!

We will have our AGM at the March meeting, followed by a very exciting talk by Robert Gourlay. I take this opportunity on behalf of all our members to thank and congratulate our president, all executive officers and the entire committee for their wonderful work and their commitment in the past year. I hope that more members will want to help and join either the committee or take some responsibility in the running of the Society.

I know that more wonderful talks are on the calendar as well as some great seminars to be announced soon.

In the year of the Monkey much can be achieved with the vibrant creative energies available, so let's all participate in some way and continue to work towards making this Society as great as it can be.

Until next time..

My Introduction to Dowsing

Marty Cain NH

Canadian Society of Questers, Winter 2003

In 1981 Rupert Sheldrake, a British bio-chemist, published his controversial book 'A New Science of Life', in which he proposed that all objects are surrounded by 'morphic fields' that define them and determine their form through time and space. This implies that the workings of the universe are less like a machine and more like a living being. Astonishing as this news seemed to be for the scientific community, it was ordinary for the native cultures around the world whose ways of life are informed by ancient wisdom.

My Grandfather, Frank Witkus, was born in Lithuania and, I suspect, knew a lot about ancient traditions. He was Newport, New Hampshire's resident water dowser. Dowsing, called Biolocation in Europe, is the ancient art of finding water with a forked stick or pendulum. Grandfather's favourite tool was cut from a willow branch, the next best was apple. No one but a fool would buy land or build a house without first finding out if there was potable water available.

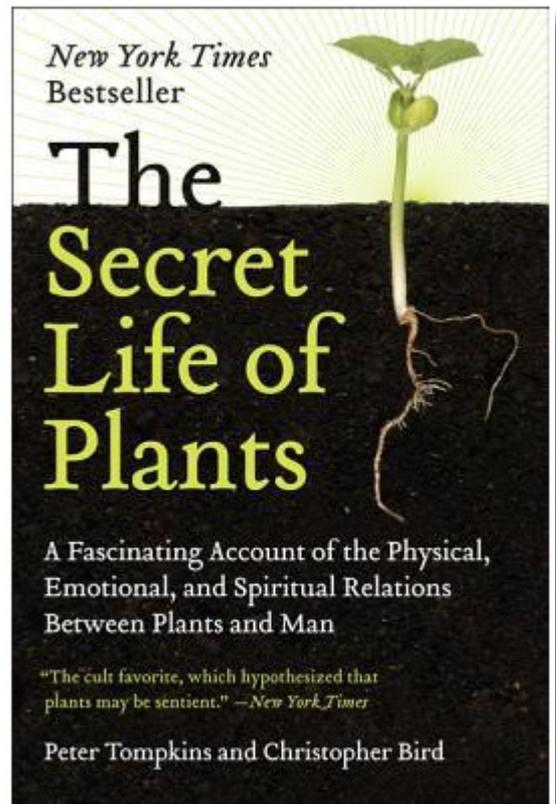

This little girl child, however, never happened to accompany Grandfather on the many trips he took to dowse water for his friends and neighbours. But, he also had a passion for gardening and I often joined him on short treks into the nearby woods to gather wild flowers for transplanting into his much loved garden at our camp on Perkins Pond. I never even thought to question when he asked each plant if it wanted to live in his garden. Even though I do not remember hearing them answer, I was sure they must have as we always respected the wishes of those who did not want to move.

He never came right out and said that plants, like animals, had the ability to hear and understand what we said and had wills of their own. No, he just always treated them as though they did. By the time I was six Grandfather had taught me how to transplant wild flowers, how to dowse for water and to respect the wishes of all living creatures.

Years later I read ‘The Secret Life of Plants’ written by Christopher Bird and Peter Tompkins.

They wrote of experiments using EKGs attached to the leaves of plants to record the plant’s reactions to threats of being burnt with a match, actually being burnt with a match, and even the thoughts of the scientist’s intention to burn the plant. They found that the thoughts of being burnt created the greatest reaction recorded on the EKG graph.

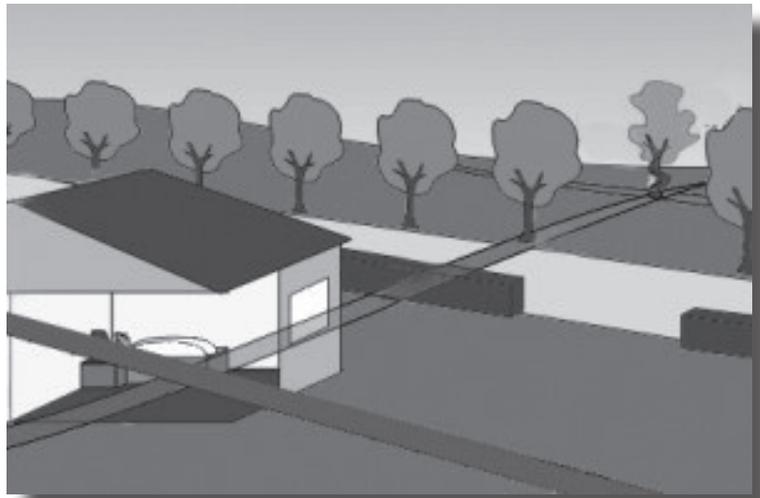

The scientists were even more surprised to find that a violent reaction was recorded by an EKG attached to a plant at the same moment that its owner was in an automobile accident a few miles away. For me reading these books only confirmed my grandfather’s teachings in a more scientific language with broader implications. I found it to be only slightly more challenging to adopt the concepts of Sheldrake’s theories of morphic resonance, or the Gaia theory of the ‘Living Earth’.

My biggest astonishment occurred in 1986 when I attended my first national dowsers’ convention in Danville, VT. Two old master dowsers diverted a water stream forty feet under ground. I thought at first this was some kind of group hypnosis until a couple joined us, not knowing what had taken place, and dowsed the water to be running in a direction ninety degrees from what we had known to be its original path.

This confirmed for me that the water vein had indeed been diverted. The old Maine dowsers had simply hammered a short piece of iron bar into the ground, leaving about eighteen inches exposed, and then tapped the bar on one side with the hammer.

The two or three taps indicated the direction they wanted the water to flow.

I had studied physics in high school and college but this was not physics. A simple tap on an iron bar could not have the force to change the course of water forty feet underground. How had this been done? The only explanation that encompassed all my questions was that the dowsers actually communicated with the water and the water was willing to play and so turned to flow in the direction requested.

That meant water was conscious! Was everything conscious? My whole belief system, the sum total of what I had been taught, was instantly expanded beyond the scope that I was ready to hold. Sure, I knew that plants, insects and animals and birds were alive and conscious.

My cat seemed to be aware of my every thought. But it struck me as an immense leap to include water and perhaps everything else. What were the implications of this ‘reality’? What if ... ?

I felt confused and wanted to be alone. I could not talk to anyone. It was nearly two days before I felt comfortable joining the activities of the convention. There was no denying it. Something immeasurable had happened and my world would never again be the same.

The ‘Less-Than-A-Minute-Energy-Fix’

How to Keep Your Energy Balanced

*By Mo Wheeler and Rebecca Gurland
American Society of Dowsers Fall 2015*

Why should you want your energy to be balanced? Because you want to be able to focus and function at your best. First, a note of background information about the co-authors and important sources: both of them trained with Donna Eden and incorporated her methods into their work. ‘The Energy Fix’ adapts many of the ideas in Eden’s book, ‘Energy Medicine: Balance Your Body’s Energies for Optimum Health, Joy, and Vitality’ (Donna Eden with David Feinstein, 1998). Mo also used the work of Paul E. and Gail E. Dennison: ‘Brain Gym: Teacher’s Edition Revised’ (1994). Mo and Rebecca highly recommend both books.

Mo dowsed, telling guidance (her team of unseen helpers) that she wanted to create a really fast way to balance energy. Using her chart that includes many possibilities of what a dowser can do, Mo asked “Where do I start?” The answer was “Balance Energy” and “Energy Medicine”. With the two books mentioned above handy, Mo continued with “Something in this book?” or “Something in this book?” “Do I need something else?” This is how the five-step ‘Less-Than-A-Minute-Energy-Fix’ was created. It’s also an example of how each of us can co-create with spirit!

‘The Energy Fix’ was designed as a quick, easy and most effective way to clear, balance and strengthen your personal energy in the best possible order. The technique is applicable to most issues with more than one possible solution. Think of several possibilities. Then test each one on a continuum of at least 1 to 5.

Hold the pendulum in one hand and use the five fingers of the other hand to test the degree it is appropriate. Try using a continuum in all dowsing: we have found it is far more useful than a simple yes/no answer.

That is how the 'Less-Than-A-Minute-Energy-Fix' was created and why we feel confident in recommending it to everyone. The 'Energy Fix' lay dormant for a couple of years, however, until Mo finally decided to introduce it to her co-workers to prevent interference with their work as the Energy Healing Partners team. The response was somewhat less than enthusiastic.

One day at a team meeting Merrill Cook looked around the room and announced that everyone was energetically 'unclear'. Merrill has the gift of being able to see these things and suggested everyone do the 'Energy Fix' together. Much to their surprise, all ten people became clear! Merrill was also surprised with what she had witnessed. Ever since then the Less-Than-A-Minute Energy Fix has become the group's 'sure fix' for unbalanced and often unclear (meaning 'free of biosphere disturbing') energy. The steps are described below with ways you can demonstrate to yourself or others that it works.

1. Drink water.

It seems a natural place to start, since water is essential to not only our car batteries, but ourselves as batteries. Since caffeine is dehydrating, it's best to forego the morning coffee or caffeinated tea and start every day with a glass of water. Or, drink the coffee and then drink 1+1/2 times as much water to bring you back to where you started. Another glass of water will then be in order.

'Guidance' suggests drinking 40-60 ounces a day [1.2-1.8 litres]. Since there are individual differences, we suggest dowsing the ideal number of ounces you need. Then ask how close you come to that ideal on an average daily basis. When backpacking in the wilderness, Mo learned to check the darkness of her urine to make sure she was getting enough water. Toxins can cause urine to be darker and that is a good sign that you aren't drinking enough water.

It's not easy in our busy lives to drink that much water. It helps if you carry water with you wherever you go. Keep it handy and visible to help you remember, especially as you work on your computer or become absorbed in a difficult task. Mo finds that gulps work better than sips and tries for 5-7 gulps with each lifting of the glass or bottle. In the morning you can set out the appropriate number of water bottles needed to help you remember and then watch your progress as you get to your quota. (Guidance recommends Aquafina-purified drinking water.) Rebecca takes a thermos when traveling around town or when at work.

Check it out. You can tell whether caffeine is good for YOU by touching your hair and testing the strength of a muscle. Your body knows when you are at risk and activates your adrenal response to move energy to where it is needed-not your hair! First lift something heavy to see how it feels. Then hold a caffeinated beverage in your hand and test your strength by lifting again. Your strength will probably be weaker. Drink a glass of water and test again. We rest our case! (A special note of appreciation to Donna Eden for this method of demonstrating with energy tests.)

2. Zip Up.

Donna Eden's method is to run your hand, a few inches from your body, from the pubic bone to the bottom of your mouth, where Central Vessel ends, thus strengthening this important energy meridian. Central Vessel helps regulate which energies are allowed into our energy field and can keep out the negative.

It can jump around and help out other meridians as well.

Don't continue beyond your mouth, as that may weaken another meridian - Governing Vessel -which also ends at the mouth from the other direction. We suggest stopping at the collarbone to be ready for the next step, but you can take it a little further if you wish. Just be careful not to run your hand backwards down Central Vessel and unzip yourself!

We have watched many people zip up and then immediately unzip themselves by letting their hand fall straight back down the meridian. If you move right into the next step, it helps avoid this natural tendency.

Zip up before you go out in public-to a grocery store or department store, or even for a walk down the street. Mo places a blue tape on the handle of her car door to remind her when she gets out of the car. Be in charge of your energy! Three to four seconds can strengthen your biosphere when surrounded by people who are negative, the electromagnetic energy of your television, computer or cell phone-and fix some of the biosphere disturbing energies that may compromise the integrity of your energy field. In three or four seconds, this says to the environment, "I am in charge of my energy and what I allow into my biosphere. I will allow in only what is helpful to me."

Check it out. You can test this out for yourself. Donna Eden suggests testing the strength of a muscle before and after thinking about something unpleasant. First lift something heavy and see how it feels. Then think a negative thought and lift it. You will most likely be weaker and notice a difference. Zip up and think of the same thing, or something even worse, and your muscle will test strong.

3. Rub K-27.

The K-27 acupuncture points are the end points of the Kidney meridian. This meridian plays a crucial role in helping our energy be clear and balanced, especially helping the other meridians that run up and down the different sides of our body. (If the K-27 points are tender, it's a sign that we really need clearing!)

To find these points, follow the collarbone toward the center of the chest. When you get to the bump at the end, drop down and out about an inch into an indentation just below the collarbone, one on each side of the center of your chest.

Rub the points firmly for about five seconds. We can do this right after we zip up. The effect is to correct our energies if they have reversed, or are flowing backwards. When our energies flow backwards, a “Yes” will be a “No” and a “No” will be a “Yes” in dowsing and we will feel tired and unable to focus. Rubbing K-27 is especially helpful if you are driving and start feeling drowsy or if you are working and find you can’t concentrate.

Check it out. Donna Eden suggests reading any sentence backwards. A muscle will test weak to indicate this is not as it should be; your energy may now be reversed. Testing a yes or no response will tell you if it is. Remember that yes needs to be strong and no needs to be weak. Then rub the K-27 points, read the sentence backwards again and test again. For flexibility, you may be able to read forward or backward and stay strong.

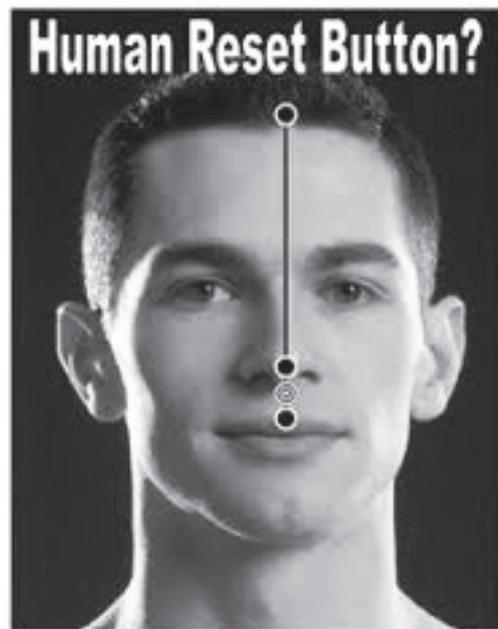

4&5. Push Space Buttons.

Space Buttons are places on your body that you can push in on to correct the energies flowing from front to back and back to front. You access the energies behind you when you think of the past and energies in front of you when you think of the future, whether pleasant or unpleasant. Stay in the present for a more fully functioning and fulfilling life!

The Dennisons suggest pushing under the nose with one hand as the other hand pushes just above the tailbone, with both hands pushing at the same time.

For our modification of Space Buttons, in Steps 4 and 5 (two places done as one push) use three fingers (index, middle and ring, both placed vertically) to push simultaneously on the Third Eye in the middle of the forehead, and the same three fingers on the other hand to push the indentation at the middle of the back of the head where it connects to the neck.

If you use one hand and do it as two moves, it is important to avoid moving your hand over your head to the back of the neck. This strengthens the energy moving backwards rather than forward. Move your hand around your head to the back of the head. Dowse on a continuum to see which will work best for you. (We could have combined Steps 4 and 5 as one step, but then there would be four in all - five is a more powerful number, bringing to mind the strength of a pentagon.)

You are strengthening the Governing Meridian that runs from your tailbone over the top of your head to the top of your mouth, and is associated with the central nervous system. The Dennisons say pushing Space Buttons will “facilitate increased nourishment to the brain through the blood and cerebrospinal fluid, nourishment necessary for relaxed, optimal functioning” (1994, p. 28).

To start, your hands are already under your collar-bone - just move them to push in on the Third Eye and then the back of your head to feel more relaxed, centered and grounded.

Check it out. You can test this for yourself. The Dennisons suggest quickly running your eyes down three columns of numbers (see below) and then test the strength of a muscle. It will usually test weak. See below.

52	24	87
38	92	62
75	85	33
28	41	29
94	52	76

Then do Space Buttons. Now run your eyes down the three columns and test again. Practice Makes Perfect.

The final step in creating this technique was to dowse different possibilities for doing various steps on a continuum, to see which one ‘Guidance’ preferred. The method described above is the outcome.

Like any habit, learning to use the ‘Less-Than-A-Minute-Energy-Fix’ just takes practice. Think of places in your home where you are likely to need to remind yourself of the protocol: post copies there until it’s easy to remember without referring to them. After a while you may feel a sense of connectedness that is reinforcing. It’s so easy and so fast you can make ‘The Energy Fix’ a regular and important part of your day: do it every morning, as well as any time you feel things aren’t going as they should. You can’t overdo it. Keep your energy field clear and balanced with ‘The Energy Fix’ and see how your life improves!

Is This Land Suitable to Support a House?

By David E. Stanger

Canadian Society of Questers, Spring 2003

A recent shallow well near Lake Massawhipi in Quebec has brought forth a new concern when considering wells for houses on certain land. Every time any structure is built on Mother Earth we cause some damage.

I had received a call to look for a well on the property noted above. The first time I went there I could not find the location. The directions were vague. I got the right road but there were many houses and locations on the road and its branches. It was primarily a summer cottage area, with some full time houses.

The second time I went there the property was found and the man who owned it.

The land itself was sloping down towards the road, a lot below the road and the lake below this. It was in scruffy trees and bushes with quite a bit of grass on it. The ground always seemed marshy even though it was on a slope. We dowsed a location for a well, though I don't like shallow wells in general.

Some time later I was called back - they had gone down to 16' with a backhoe and no water. I had my son Tom the second time and we both looked. During this visit the owner commented that he could not get electrical power. The right of way to the lines across the street were only on the existing line and the owner of the land would not grant the power company permission to cross the rest of his land, to bring power to his lot. This did not seem right to me but I ignored the alarm bells that should have been ringing.

Tom and I rechecked the land and found more sites and I eventually did some water diversions to bring more water to the existing hold. This hole was eventually deepened. to 22, still no water.

The question was now put into my mind, “Should this man be building on this land?” the answer : “No!”

I then asked Tom to look into the land and he came up with a final solution to where the problem was ... He found “This land is too fragile for a house and should not be built on!”

I feel that Mother Earth is moving again and we now must ask the question “at certain times”. “Does Mother Earth wish this land to be developed or built on?” And/or “Should I be working on this land to develop water?”

These questions should be answered before accepting a job. At any time it is very hard to tell someone who has just purchased a piece of land that it is not suitable for a house, when he may already have a permit to build from the municipality.

It is even harder after you are on-site. It is not too hard to say over the phone that you can't do the job, and as much extra information as you wish.

Why I got permission to dowse in the first place when asking “Can I, May I, Should I,” does not have an answer yet. It may be just that Mother Earth did not have all the answers in the first place. Who knows?

Later when speaking with an Abenaky Indian of high standing, he said that he is expecting much the same thing. Spirits and Energies are not all in agreement on where Earth should go and ‘consensus’ is needed. This may in part explain my first attempts to look for water at this site.

Where is Hell, Where is Heaven?

One day a samurai came to Dzen Master Hakuin and asked:

“Where is paradise? Where is hell? And where are the gates of heaven and hell?” The Samurai knew only two things: life and death. He did not have any philosophy, he just wanted to know where were the gates – to escape hell and go to heaven.

“Who are you?” Hakuin asked. “I am the leader of samurais, and the Emperor pays a tribute to me”, the warrior replied.

Hakuin laughed and said: “Are you really the leader of samurais? You look like some poor ragamuffin!”

The samurai’s pride was hurt. He forgot what he had come for, whipped out his sword and was going to kill Hakuin. And Hakuin laughed again and said: “This is the gate of hell. With a sword, being in anger, with your ego you will open it.”

The samurai realized that idea, calmed dawn and sheathed his sword. And Hakuin continued: “And now, when you calmed down, you open the gate of heaven.”

Heaven and hell are inside you. And the gates are inside you. If you are not conscious, this is the gate of hell. If you are vigilant and conscious, this is the gate of heaven.

But people continue to think that heaven and hell are somewhere outside. Heaven and hell are not after life, they are here and now. And the gates are always open. At any moment you make your choice between heaven and hell.

Was It Only Practice?

By W. Clive Tucker

Reprinted from The American Dowser, Summer, 2000

One summer evening several years ago, I got the urge to try my hand at stopping a vein of water by remote dowsing. I drew a rough plan of the area and asked for the nearest water dome. My pendulum showed a dome that was located on the far side of a nearby hill.

The dome was on an uninhabited hillside and all of its water veins appeared to run downhill toward a nearby pond. This was a town watershed and seemed safe to work on. Newfoundland has many such watershed areas.

With my trusty pendulum I located the best vein for my practice and soon had the vein stopped, or at least my dowsing said I did. I checked on the other veins and after finding that their flow had increased, I just leaned back and smugly thought to myself, “a piece of cake... nothing to it.”

The next evening when I came home and had just sat down for dinner, I glanced out the window to see a real elderly lady coming my way. She was a neighbour and, from her haste, seemed she was headed for me with a serious mission. She came non-stop right into the kitchen and shouted at me, “Clive, you’ve got to come to my house right now. My new well has gone dry.”

When I asked, “What happened to it?” she replied that the water had gone bad in her old well and someone had selected a new well site. She had the new well dug, lined, and that it had lots of water. The only problem was that it would not pass the water test. Her neighbours kept pumping the well out, hoping it would clear out the pollution.

This evening after pumping the well dry, there was no water coming back in to refill it and she wanted me to do something about it right away. I needed to think about it, so I told her to go home and I would be there soon.

After she left, I got out my previous dowsing plan and checked where all the veins flowed. All but the one I had spotted flowed toward the pond. The vein I had stopped had run around the hill, under the road, under several houses and septic disposal fields, and finally to where she had dug her new well.

My dowsing told me that the water was potable at the dome but had become contaminated along the way. It just happened that I had stopped the one that supplied her water.

I went to the site for a look, feeling guilty, like I was returning to the scene of the crime. I raised the cover and peeked in. I was met by a very strong pungent odour and the bottom of the well was barely damp. I explained as best I could, that nothing could be done to produce clean water in that well.

I selected a new site nearby that would have good water and advised her to have another well dug, which she did with good results.

For some time after this event I thought that perhaps I conducted my dowsing in a reckless manner. However, now that a few years have passed I reflect over the way that all those bits and pieces came together and wonder.

It still puzzles me, “Did a spirit guide or guardian angel, who knew this lady had a problem in a roundabout way, cause me to get involved and provide a solution that would protect her?”

- Clive Tucker

The Passing of a Friend

Today we mourn the passing of a beloved old friend, Common Sense, who has been with us for many years. No one knows for sure how old he was since his birth records were long ago lost in bureaucratic red tape.

He will be remembered as having cultivated such valuable lessons as: Knowing when to come in out of the rain; Why the early bird gets the worm; Life isn't always fair, and Maybe it was my fault.

Common Sense lived by simple, sound financial policies (don't spend more than you can earn) and reliable strategies (adults, not children, are in charge).

His health began to deteriorate rapidly when well intentioned but overbearing regulations were set in place. Reports of a 6 year old boy charged with sexual harassment for kissing a classmate; teens suspended from school for using mouthwash after lunch, and a teacher fired for reprimanding an unruly student, only worsened his condition.

Common Sense lost ground when parents attacked teachers for doing the job that they themselves had failed to do, in disciplining their unruly children.

It declined even further when schools were required to get parental consent to administer sun lotion or an aspirin to a student, but could not inform parents when a student became pregnant and wanted to have an abortion.

Common Sense lost the will to live as the churches became businesses, and criminals received better treatment than their victims.

Common Sense took a beating when you couldn't defend yourself from a burglar in your own home, and the burglar could sue you for assault.

Common Sense finally gave up the will to live, after a woman failed to realize that a steaming cup of coffee was hot. She spilled a little in her lap, and was promptly awarded a huge settlement.

Common Sense was preceded in death, by his parents Truth and Trust, by his wife, Discretion, by his daughter, Responsibility, and by his son, Reason.

He is survived by his four stepbrothers;

- I Know My Rights
- I Want It Now
- Someone Else Is To Blame
- I'm A Victim

Not many attended his funeral because so few realized he was gone.

The Grief of Elephants

by Robert Stokes

Lawrence Anthony, a world-renowned conservationist, environmentalist, explorer and best-selling author - one of his most famous books was 'The Elephant Whisperer' - died of a heart attack on 2 March 2012, at his home on the Thula Thula game reserve in Zululand, South Africa.

According to his wife, Francoise, two days after her husband's death, 20 elephants, led by two large matriarchs, showed up outside their house. The elephants had walked for more than 19 kilometres from their habitat, in single file, to reach their friend's house.

Why did the elephants come? How did they know that their old friend had died or was about to? How did they know to find their friend's house after more than a year's absence?

Animal researchers have always remarked about the memory and intelligence of elephants, but the human emotion of loss these animals demonstrated over the death of their friend, was nothing less than incredible.

Lawrence Anthony had a reputation for bold animal conservation initiatives. But his private focus was the rehabilitation of traumatised African elephants. He had developed a unique relationship with a wild herd of elephants on the Thula Thula Reserve in Zululand. These were the elephants that showed up at Anthony's house to pay their respects to their special friend.

It was their way of silently saying goodbye to a man who valued their lives. It is also a remarkable proof that so-called dumb animals have the capacity to grieve and mourn the loss of those close to them.

Anthony's wife said the herd of elephants remained outside the house for two days and two nights as a sort of post-mortem vigil. On the morning of the third day, they departed, making the long, slow trek back home.

You've gotta love the Irish

From Wayne Follett

Reprinted from the Canadian Society of Quester, Spring 2003

This is the transcription of the ACTUAL radio conversation between the British and the Irish off the coast of Kerry, October 1998. Radio conversation released by the chief of naval operations, 10.10.98.

Irish: Please divert your course 15 degrees to the south to avoid a collision.

British: Recommend you divert your course 15 degrees to the north to avoid a collision.

Irish: Negative. You will have to divert your course 15 degrees to the south to avoid a collision.

British: This is a Captain of a British Navy Ship. I say again, divert YOUR course.

Irish: Negative. I say again you will have to divert YOUR course.

British: This is the Aircraft Carrier HMS Britannia, the second largest ship in the British Atlantic Fleet. We are accompanied by three destroyers, three cruisers and numerous support vessels.

I demand you change YOUR course 15 degrees north. I say again, that is 15 degrees north or counter measures will be undertaken to ensure the safety of this ship.

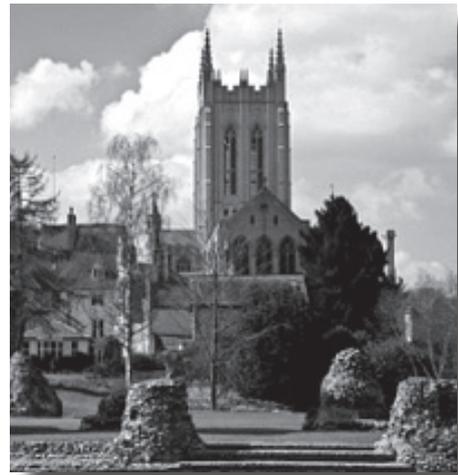

Irish: This is a lighthouse... Your call.

Speaker for April 17th, 2016

Richard Summers

- Michael and Mary Lines & the Dragon Lines -

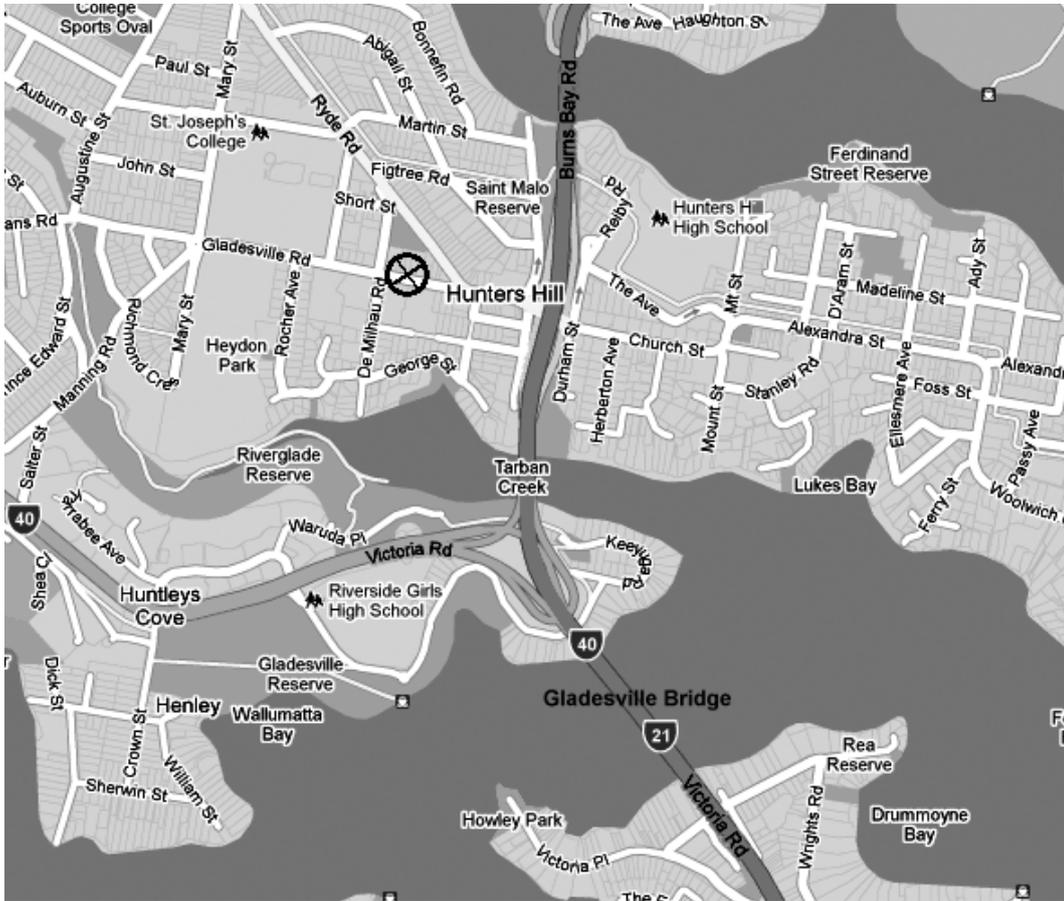

Richard will talk about the Michael and Mary Lines, the Dragon Lines, the Apollo and Athena Lines (dowsed by motorbike back in about 2000) and the magical town of Bury St Edmunds in Suffolk where St Edmund, King and Martyr, was a focus of pilgrimage for over 500 years.

Richard will present also the story about the Russian Monastery, where the bones of St Edmund were stolen from Bury St Edmunds by the French in late medieval times, and then taken to a Monastery in Toulouse, southern France.

They were brought back to Arundel Castle on the South Coast of England, with a view to enshrining them in the then new Roman Catholic Westminster Cathedral in London. In the early 1900s, at the last moment, the Archbishop of Westminster put a stop to it after DNA testing.

Richard will talk about the connection with Uluru/Ayers Rock which is apparently in line with two other formations, Mt. Connor, which has a flat top and is not visited by tourists, and the Olgas to the south which are purple. Some feel that Ayer's Rock is Yang, while the Olgas are Yin. Mt Connor is believed to have ancient contacts with UFOs
